President Returns.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 29.—A sortie against Senator Tydings, of Maryland, in his own stronghold lay ahead of President Roosevelt as he headed back to Washington tonight. He will arrive in Washington at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Next Monday, the President will deliver a Labor Day address at Denton, Md., in which, it is expected, he will use a labor theme as the framework for a strong indorsement of Representative Lewis, New Deal opponent of Senator Tydings.

Aimed at Farmers.

The heart of the Eastern Shore farming counties was chosen instead of industrial Baltimore as the forum for the Labor Day speech because of reports from Maryland New Dealers that it is among the farmers that Senator Tydings has his greatest following.

Representative Lewis' unvarying support of the New Deal labor and social security legislation, which won him the indorsement of both the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor, has proved his greatest handicap in the conservative Eastern Shore counties.

The summer White House was unable to add any details to the plans for the invasion of Maryland. Presumably the President's address will be broadcast nationally, although arrangements had not been completed and the hour remained to be set.

Lewis, Goldsborough Guests.

The President will leave Washington next Sunday morning, motor along the Maryland side of the river to the site of a proposed bridge over the Potomac River, linking Morgantown, Md., and Dahlgren, Va., and then board the yacht Potomac for a cruise down the bay.

The next day he will land at Crisfield, Md., and motor to Denton. He has invited Representative Lewis and Representative Goldsborough, a stanch New Dealer, whose home is at Denton, to accompany him on the entire trip.

A test of the potency of Presidential condemnation as opposed to the prestige and patronage of an incumbent Senator will have been decided in South Carolina before the President tilts against Senator Tydings. The Democrats of South Carolina will decide tomorrow

Johnston Rapped.

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 29.—South Carolina's stormy Democratic Senatorial campaign drew to a close tonight with Edgar A. Brown, avowed "New Dealer," firing a vitriolic broadside at Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who is backed by President Roosevelt to unseat the veteran Senator E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith in tomorrow's primary.

Smith, rounding out 30 years of service, opposed a number of major Administration measures, but contended he had voted for more than 80 per cent of the Roosevelt program.

Avoids Open Reversal.

State Senator Brown, who unexpectedly withdrew from the race Saturday after campaigning three months as a supporter of the Roosevelt Administration, answered Johnston's challenge to choose between the two remaining candidates, with a telegram caustically criticizing the Governor, but refrained from openly asking his adherents to support Smith.

Johnston had challenged Brown to choose between himself and Smith, in a telegram sent earlier today.

"In view of the President's statement in the morning papers," the Governor said in his telegram, "it is evident if you want to help him in carrying forward his policies, you will vote for me for the United States Senate.

"On the other hand, if you have been only a stalking horse in this campaign for the Liberty Leaguers, Republicans and Roosevelt haters, you will vote for Smith.

"Under which flag do you fight? Answer for publication in afternoon papers."

Called Talmadge Ally.

The complete text of Brown's reply to Johnston:

"Your insolent telegram of this date received and my reply is as follows: I have been a New Dealer for 20 years and when you were fighting the resolution indorsing Roosevelt in the 1932 State Democratic Convention I was for Roosevelt.

"When you brought Huey Long to South Carolina to villify and abuse the Administration I was for Roosevelt. I was still for him when the people of Columbia would not permit Long to speak in a public building and when you permitted him through your henchmen to build a stand on the State House grounds to speak from.

"When you were lying in the political bed and were with and were a disciple of Talmadge of Georgia, the bitterest enemy that Roosevelt

Post to broadcast South Carolina returns tonight!

The primary fight in South Carolina today between "Cotton Ed" Smith, foe of the New Deal, and Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who made announcement of his Senatorial ambitions on the White House steps, is the first big test of President Roosevelt's "purges." As the returns come in, they will be broadcast direct from The Post's City Room . . . through WJSV . . . starting at 7:30 P. M. . . . and frequently throughout the evening.

The previous record for the East-West flight was made by Col. Roscoe Turner whose time was 11 hours and 30 minutes.

Labor Board Head Lashes 'Bias' Accusers

Denies Favoring Unions; Cites 'Reclamation of Harlan County.'

By Sidney Olson.

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board suggested last night that critics of the board "should take the day off" while "America should rejoice in the reclamation of Earlan County."

Lauding the agreement between the Kentucky coal operators and the United Mine Workers, Madden made a hard-hitting defense of the Wagner act, digressing only to slap at the split between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization. He said:

"Some of the most acute problems continue to spring from the division in the main current of the labor movement. The acrimony and bitterness which accompany this civil conflict make the task of the umpire difficult indeed when the interests of the two factions come into collision. Each of the two

Coroner Lays Jail 'Baking' to Warden, Aide

Says '6 or 8' Persons Will Be Arrested in Death of 4 Convicts.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—Coroner Hersch, who promised a "higher-up" at Philadelphia County Prison would be arrested for the "roasting" deaths of four convicts, said today only Superintendent William B. Mills or Deputy Warden Frank Craven could have given the order to "turn on the heat" in the prison's isolation cell-block.

"We know definitely who turned on the heat which resulted in the deaths," Hersch said, "and only Mills or Craven could issue such an order."

Hersch issued his statement after the second day of questioning guards and officials at the prison. He said "six or eight" persons will be arrested, including an official, after a coroner's inquest Wednesday morning.

The four men were found dead in the tiny isolation cells Monday. Twenty-one other prisoners placed there for refusing to abandon a five-day hunger strike against a monotonous diet, were near death from the intense heat when the bodies were discovered.

Seven large steam radiators line the corridor opposite the steel cell doors in the cell-block. Hersch said one of the radiators could generate enough heat to kill all of the inmates in the cell-block known as the "Klondike" and the extra six were obviously installed "for one purpose—the heat treatment for unruly prisoners."

A scientific test of conditions under which the four prisoners lived for three days was tentatively planned for tomorrow under the direction of Hersch and State Welfare Secretary Charles I. Engard.

John Roosevelt 1 Hour Early for $18.50-Week Job

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP).—Exactly an hour early and "really serious" about the whole thing, John Roosevelt punched his first time-clock today and began earning $18.50 per week in the basement of a Boston department store.

The President's youngest son wouldn't wake his bride of two months when he left for work because it was too early.

John's exact job hasn't been determined, but he was assigned to the stock room, apparently to become familiar with merchandising lists. Advertising, however, is his chief interest.

"Gosh," he said, "I hope they don't send me around with a truck filling up ladies' garment counters."

Italy Evicts French Tillers of Its Soil

Nice, France, Aug. 29 (AP).—About 50 French farm families evicted from their lands on the Italian side of the border plodded back into France today with as many of their possessions as they could bring.

The exodus from the Italian region east of the border village of Isola was in compliance with an Italian ultimatum to abandon the ground by today, with the provision that they could return to continue harvesting their crops through September.

Bolivia, Paraguay Ratify Chaco Pact

Buenos Aires, Aug. 29 (AP).—Representatives of Bolivia and Paraguay formally exchanged instruments of ratification today of the July 21 peace treaty which ended their century-old dispute over the Chaco.

The work of establishing the boundary, which under the treaty must be completed in two months, will be in the hands of the six neutrals—Brazil, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and the United States.

Gallup Poll in South Carolina Gives 'Purged' Senator Edge

By George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 29.—Senator Smith, a telegraphic survey indicated today, will receive 57 per cent of the votes cast tomorrow in the bitter South Carolina primary, in which his New Deal opponent, Gov. Olin D. Johnston, will receive 43 per cent.

GALLUP.

Withdrawal Saturday night of a third candidate, Edgar Brown, has complicated and confused earlier predictions. The American Institute of Public Opinion, however, had put to the voters before Brown's withdrawal this question:

"If there is a run-off primary between Smith and Johnston, how will you vote?" The estimate is based on the replies to that question.

Also, prior to Brown's withdrawal, the institute had found the three candidates running as follows:

Smith, 51 per cent.
Johnston, 36 per cent.
Brown, 13 per cent.

Almost one voter in six had not yet made up his mind as to how he would vote.

The replies to the two questions indicated that of the Brown voters released by his sudden withdrawal, Johnston will receive the votes of a few more than will be given Smith.

Brown's name, however, remains on the ballot because of the lateness of his withdrawal and the prospects are that he will receive

Hines Linked To Schultz by 4 More Men

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 29.—Four more prosecution witnesses in Supreme Court today testified they saw James J. Hines, veteran Tammany leader, associating with Dutch Schultz, gangster, in Bridgeport, Conn., in the summer of 1935, when Schultz was a fugitive from pustice.

Their testimony in Hines' trial on charges of conspiring to protect "the Dutchman's" policy mob in Harlem from police and courts raised the total of State's witnesses directly accusing Hines of working with Schultz to six.

Today's hearing, which opened the third week of trial, was marked by the complaint of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, prosecutor, in open court, that Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, who is hearing the case, had turned over to the defense, without giving him a chance to argue the matter, grand jury minutes which were helping Hines' counsel in cross-examination.

"Don't Be Oversensitive."

Justice Pecora retorted he was acting within the powers of the court "in the interests of justice," and cited the case of "The People vs. Walsh" as a precedent of which he already had apprised the prosecutor. The day was marked also by arguments between Dewey and Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief counsel for the defense, hotter than even the ones of the first two weeks.

At one point Dewey mimicked the courtroom manner of his antagonist, and when admonished said he thought it was a good imitation. When Stryker complained he was being insulted, Justice Pecora advised him not to be "oversensitive."

Remembers Weinberg.

The four witnesse who pointed out Hines as being in Bridgeport with Schultz were Charles W. Hughes, in 1935 assistant manager of the Hotel Barnum, there; John Pucher, head waiter at the Hotel Stratfield; Charles Wall, a former bellhop in the Hotel Barnum, and "Eddie" Corbett, former prizefighter, now running a gymnasium in Bridgeport, with whom Schultz and his fellow gangster, "Lulu" Rosenkrantz, used to box in their exile from Manhattan.

To add to their testimony, Dewey produced as witnesses Leslie V. Bateman, former mayor of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and John J. Kearns, Bronx coal dealer, to corroborate

More than a score of attorneys representing powerful financial and utility interests lined five tables in the front of the hearing room.

They and the entire utility industry watched to see how the commission would use its power to force utility holding companies to simplify their corporate structures and to confine themselves to single, compact areas.

Utilities Power & Light Corporation has properties extending over 13 States. Officials expected it might take months of hearings to determine how that power empire should be divided.

The corporation has headquarters in Chicago and its subsidiaries operate in Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois, Kentucky, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Two of the principal companies represented in the hearings are the Atlas Corporation, huge investment company holding most of the Utilities' debentures, and the Associated Gas & Electric Co., one of the largest holding companies in the country.

Both of these companies have offered plans of financial reorganization and trustees of the Webster Securities Corporation and a committee of preferred stockholders have urged other plans.

Whitehall Openly Confesses Anxiety

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Aug. 29.—Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight was considering the advisability of making a strong personal appeal to Chancellor Hitler not to take any irrevocable step toward Czechoslovakia which might provoke another world war with even more disastrous results than the last one.

Government spokesmen, definitely abandoning their false pose of optimism, now admit the European situation is extremely grave—"touch and go" is one way of putting it. Some say that not since "the war to end war" concluded in 1918 has there been such an awful possibility of a new conflict. The dangers inherent in the present deadlock in central Europe overshadow past war scares over Abyssinia, the Rhineland, Spain and China.

Chamberlain believes in doing business directly with the dictators. It was a personal message from Chamberlain to Premier Mussolini that led to the Anglo-Italian accord of last Easter. The failure to implement that accord is not discouraging Chamberlain from the idea of sending a private confidential message to Hitler.

War Games Feared.

The bearer of the message would be the British Ambassador to Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson, who was busy in Downing street today giving the prime minister and his chief lieutenants his best information as to what Hitler intends to do with his mighty military machine, now approaching a state of total mobilization under the guise of routine summer maneuvers.

The menace of these maneuvers was brought home to the British as the afternoon papers headlined the news that Hitler and his generals were inspecting the new fortifications along the Franco-German frontier. With Hitler at last on the Rhine gazing across into France, Chamberlain for one could not help remembering the famous saying of his predecessor as prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, that the British frontier is now on the Rhine. The thought of Hitler on the "British frontier" is not conducive to a prolonged continuance of the Chamber-

Referring to industry's inability to meet the Nation's military demands in 1917, Pershing said: "We must never again be caught so com-

By John Elliott.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Aug. 29.—For the first time since the World War, Chancellor Hitler today gazed upon France, the country which, in his autobiography, "Mein Kampf," he has declared must be destroyed because he says she blocks German expansion in Europe. Hitler peered at the shores of the republic he hates so bitterly from across the Rhine at Kehl, situated just opposite Strassbourg, which itself was in German hands from 1871 until November, 1918.

The Fuehrer's unexpected visit to the French frontier was made in the course of a visit to the fortifications which the Germans are constructing so frantically in the Rhineland and on which hundreds of thousands of laborers conscripted from all parts of the Reich are laboring day and night.

French diplomatic circles tonight were speculating whether Hitler's visit was just part of a gigantic game of bluff he is playing in regard to Czechoslovakia or whether he really wanted to see if the fortifications at the strategic Rhine bridge heads are far enough advanced to hold off an invasion by the French army, trying to come to the aid of the Czechs in the event of a German attack on Czechoslovakia.

Hitler, on his visit to France's Rhineland frontier, was accompanied by eight generals of the German army. Kehl was taken com-

Sudetens Ask Autonomy on Irish Pattern

By the United Press.

Prague, Aug. 29.—The Sudeten German Party of Konrad Henlein tonight drafted a demand that its 3,500,000 members be granted local self-government and cited the independence which Great Britain granted Ireland, as showing such a solution would succeed.

Viscount Runciman, British neutral mediator in the Czechoslovak minority crisis, was one of the first to receive a copy of a bulletin to be issued generally by the Sudeten German Party tomorrow citing "the success of Irish independence as a practical solution after centuries of bloodshed."

Sudeten leaders, who revealed the text of the bulletin to the United Press, said Henlein is determined to obtain full satisfaction of his eight-point Carlsbad autonomy demands, despite pressure brought to bear by Lord Runciman in his two-hour surprise meeting with Henlein Sunday.

(Under the new Irish constitution drafted by Eamon de Valera the former Irish Free State—now Eire—is a sovereign state in all internal matters but remains a member of the British commonwealth of nations and still recognizes King George VI for the purpose of foreign affairs).

The bulletin points out Ireland is just as strategically important to the defense of the British isles as the Sudeten territory with its Bohemian mountain ranges overlook-

Ernest P. Walker, acting director of the Zoo, revealed yesterday that a sailor walked into his office last Friday with a pangolin—the first, so far as is known, ever to reach the Western Hemisphere alive.

As a result, the Zoo is exhibiting what is believed to be the only pangolin to be found in any zoo, at least outside the creature's habitat in extreme southern Asia, the Philippines and parts of Africa.

A pangolin is a mammal that looks like a lizard and eats ants and termites. Mr. Walker denied that it was a kind of "missing link" between cold-blooded reptiles and warm-blooded mammals.

"It is just a highly specialized mammal," he said.

David Frazeur, 25 South street, New York City, the sailor who accomplished unwittingly what scientists have tried to do and failed, told Walker that while his ship was docked at a port in Sumatra, he awoke one morning from a terrific binge and found the critter in bed with him.

"I had a hazy recollection," he told Zoo officials, "of having picked it up from another fellow, who had it about three weeks."

Not knowing what it was and still in doubt as to how he happened to have such a pet, Frazeur kept the little animal alive throughout the long ocean voyage—a feat that science has not accomplished.

When his ship, Steel Navigator, reached Baltimore, he brought his rare prize to Washington and presented it to Zoo officials. It was their turn to wonder whether they were seeing things.

Explosion Greets Hungary's Ruler, Back From Reich

Budapest, Aug. 29 (AP).—An explosion which was heard throughout downtown Budapest occurred today 40 minutes after Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungary's regent, returning from a state visit to Germany, had landed from a Danube River steamer.

Officials said the explosion had no political meaning and denied it was a demonstration against the regent. They suggested that fireworks left over from the celebration of St. Stephen's day, August 20, might have exploded.

Police began an investigation of the blast, which threw up a large column of smoke.

Although Horthy and his host, Adolf Hitler, did not sign any agreement, officials in the regent's party said Hungary probably would join Germany in demanding positive concessions from Czechoslovakia to her minorities, including 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans and 700,000 Hungarians.

Senate Inquiry Eyes Magruder Funds Appeal

Sheppard Warns Even 'Voluntary' Political Gifts Are Illegal.

By Robert C. Albright.

Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday insisted on rigid isolation of non-policy-making Federal workers from politics and warned against even voluntary campaign contributions by employes.

Strictly interpreting the criminal code, Sheppard said Treasury and Civil Service Commission officials were "in error" in past interpretations leaving Federal workers free to make voluntary gifts when not solicited.

Checks Magruder Appeal.

Sheppard also called for published stories on last week's announcement by J. Hampton Magruder, Maryland collector of internal revenue, that he is supporting Maryland's New Deal Senatorial candidate, Representative Lewis. Magruder announced his intentions before a called meeting of non-civil service employes in his office, but said they were not "obligated" to vote as he does.

Sheppard said he wanted to "look into that."

"Internal revenue collectors have no right to take part in politics," he said, "but I want to study this instance further."

He also said he had asked committee investigators to check reports that a chain letter was being circulated among Federal employes to raise funds for renomination of Senator George of Georgia.

Other developments:

The Republican National Committee charged in the "Republican Reporter" that President Roosevelt has reduced the merit system "to a mere subterfuge to cover the greatest spoils grab in our history." It said "no administration has ever professed greater respect for civil service, and no administration has done more to exploit it and circumvent it."

An article appearing in the current issue of the Annalist charged left-wing New Dealers are now urging allocations of recovery funds be made "ruthlessly" to produce the most votes but said recovery billions have been distributed equitably up to now.

Morgenthau Contradicted.

Senator Sheppard at his press conference yesterday took direct issue with interpretations by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau of the laws against political activity of Federal workers.

Morgenthau in August, 1934, advised employes no regulations prevent them "from voluntarily contributing to the campaign fund of the party of his choice, if such contribution is made freely and without coercion or improper solicitation, and is not made to a person in the service of the United States."

Sheppard said in his opinion, Morgenthau was wrong on two points. He said it was clear to him even voluntary contributions were banned, and it made no difference whether campaign gifts were received by another employe or an outsider.

Just back from Europe, Morgenthau later reminded reporters of four memoranda he issued in 1934 warning employes against political activity and said he knew of "no other department that keeps as clean." He said he thought 99 per cent of Treasury employes live up to the spirit and text of the regulations.

Solicitor Liable.

But the Treasury Secretary made no change in his position on voluntary contributions to persons outside the Government service. In any event, he indicated the blame should attach to the solicitor and not the contributor. He said he is investigating complaints of improper solicitation of campaign funds from employes by collectors in California and indicated he would investigate the Magruder announcement in Maryland if complaint is made.

Sheppard said it is clear to him that no person in the service of the Government should contribute "anything of value" to a political campaign. A political speech, he said, is "a thing of value" as well as direct and indirect contribution of funds.

He said he thought the Civil Service Commission in published "warnings" and Works Progress Administrator Hopkins in one instance had made the same error" as Morgenthau.

Such a warning issued by the Civil Service Commission in April of this year he said "left the inference that employes can contribute voluntarily to persons outside the service." Sheppard said he thought Hopkins likewise had erred in approving posted notices by Harry S. Berry, Tennessee WPA administrator, that WPA workers could or could not, as they chose, contribute to campaign funds.

Warned Lasser.

Only last week Sheppard warned David Lasser, of the Workers Alliance, that he would be liable for citation to the Justice Department if he collected funds from WPA workers to finance political campaigning. His action was approved by two other members of the committee, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Senator Whtie (Republican), of Maine.

Sheppard said his subsequent statements opposing political contributions and activity of employes would be submitted to a full committee meeting September 8.

"The theory behind the law is this," said Sheppard: "These Government employes are working for the whole people, whom they are supposed to serve impartially. If they are politically active, they are also taking time from the efficient performance of their job."

Law Broken for McAdoo.

Sheppard said that Treasury employes in California had violated the law in voluntarily contributing to the primary campaign of Senator McAdoo, although there had been no "shake-down" for contributions.

Last night he replied to additional charges by John W. Preston, California senatorial candidate. In a letter to Preston, Sheppard denied the committee found McAdoo had permitted a 5 per cent assessment on employe salaries; that WPA and FHA funds were used to induce Preston supporters to support McAdoo; or that raffles were held with employes obligated to purchase chances in aid of McAdoo's campaign.

Sheppard advised Preston he was "in error as to what you say regarding the findings of our investigators."

Gas Company in Safety Drive

...Board banner.

Pledges Support.

"The Washington Gaslight Co. today pledged the co-operation of all its drivers in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce safe driving campaign.

"Stickers indicating the objectives of this campaign and listing five rules for safety will be affixed to the windshields of all cars. Your close observance of these rules is particularly requested.

"We are glad to participate in this movement and are proud of the record of our drivers for safe driving over the past years. We have every hope and expectation that our drivers' past records for safe driving will continue and improve over a period of years."

The Gaslight company operates 228 light and heavy vehicles and already has an efficient safety organization under the supervision of H. L. Leonard, safety engineer. During 1937, company trucks drove a total of 2,502,644 miles without a single accident, Leonard reported.

Yearly awards are made by the Gaslight company to drivers who show the best records. A total of 15,461,299 safe miles have been driven by 449 company employes during the past seven years.

Western Union Joins.

In pledging 200 messenger boys to safe driving and walking habits, J. N. Singleton, manager of the delivery department, Western Union, agreed to support The Post-Junior Board program with continued efforts to prevent accidents on Washington streets.

All Western Union job applicants, said Singleton, are required to pass rigid examinations on traffic regulations and are observed in daily drivers to recognize the double parking rule by using available space at the curb for loading and unloading.

To change the street lighting hours, now regulated by an act of Congress and make them conform with the law pertaining to automobile headlights as promulgated by the Commissioners.

To appeal through the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers and the various citizens groups to establish private play yards for youngsters during next year's school vacation period.

To secure for the District streamlined street car safety platforms similar to those in use near Seventh and F streets northwest.

Hurt in Collision.

Yesterday's sub-committee meeting, presided over by George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Auto Club, was attended by Lewis R. Barret, co-ordinator of recreation; Mrs. Walter Fry, president of the P.-T. A., and Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the Police Traffic Division.

As Washington's "safety ball" continued to roll yesterday, the accident toll continued low.

The most seriously hurt was Thelma Harris, 32, colored, of 1245 South Capitol street. She suffered a fractured pelvis and possible fractured hip when the car in which she was riding was in a collision at Third and I streets southwest. She was taken to Providence Hospital.

Joe Jones, 8, colored, was struck near his home at 30 Q street northwest and was taken to Sibley Hospital with bruises and lacerations.

Juanita Cunningham, 12, of 428 G place northwest, suffered leg injuries when she was knocked from her bicycle near her home. She was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Tydings Hopes C.I.O. Is Praised By Roosevelt

Welcomes Such Tactics on the Eastern Shore, He Declares.

Senator Tydings last night expressed hope that President Roosevelt will "speak out for the C. I. O." in his Labor Day address at Denton, on the Maryland Eastern Shore.

Representative Lewis, who enjoys both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. backing, is believed to be running behind Tydings on the Eastern Shore, where sentiment against the C. I. O. is strong.

Hungerford Speaks Up.

The 'forgotten man" of the Democratic race, Arthur E. Hungerford, former NRA official, broke a week's silence to broadcast an appeal for more funds to continue his campaign as a New Dealer.

"I am with the President and believe that greater progress will be made by going ahead on New Deal lines," Hungerford said, "but you and I know the future of the country depends upon the continuation of the fundamental virtues."

He accused Tydings' law partners of representing "special interests, seeking special favors in the Legislature, in the courts and before heads of Federal agencies who owe their jobs to Senator Tydings."

Earlier last night University of Maryland alumni refused to censure Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of the institution, for his action in inviting President Roosevelt to speak in the State in the interest of Representative Lewis.

A resolution describing Byrd's overture as "bad taste" was tabled by the group of 30, meeting near Senator Tydings' campaign headquarters in the Lord Baltimore Hotel, after several members of the group expressed fear they might be setting themselves up "as a target."

Called "Impropriety."

The resolution read:

"It is bad taste for any individual clothed with office in the University of Maryland to inject themselves into any political dispute by direction, indirection or inference."

More than 100 telegrams had been sent out last week to prominent alumni in an effort to rally support for Tydings on the basis of his record of "loyalty" to the university and the alleged impropriety of Dr. Byrd's invitation to the President.

A brief calm settled over the Maryland political arena as candidates looked to Washington, where President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley arrive today, for details of the New Deal high command's plan of campaign against the blacklisted Senator Tydings.

Lewis in Baltimore.

While speculation centered on the exact contents of speeches to be delivered by the No. 1 New Dealer on his week-end "march through Maryland" and the personnel to accompany the President at various stages of the journey, the principals in the Free State's bitter contest for Senatorial nomination limited themselves to informal extemporaneous speeches.

Representative Lewis spoke twice in Baltimore last night, first at a labor rally and then a meeting of the "Progressive Democratic Club." The Willard Jones Fifth District Democratic Club heard Senator Tydings.

Word 'Communist' Redefined by Dies Group, Paper Says

Boston, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Investigation by the Dies Congressional committee of "un-American activities" will result in a new definition of the word "Communist," Zion's Herald, independent Methodist weekly, editorialized in its current issue.

The old definition was "comparatively simple," said the editorial, released today, but the next dictionary "will have to go into a more comprehensive definition," which, it said, would include:

"One who is devoted to world peace; a child actress in the motion pictures; a youth of brains and ideals; a friend of labor; an open-minded college or university professor; anyone whom we dislike."

AAA to Hear Georgia Peach Marketing Plan

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced yesterday that a public hearing on a proposed marketing agreement and order program to regulate the handling of Georgia peaches in interstate commerce will be held September 15 at Macon, Ga.

Request for the hearing was made by A. B. Williams, of Yatesville, chairman, acting for a committee of nine growers representing all peach producing districts in the State.

Nazi Seeks Jewish Ban in Manila Club

The War Department has received a report from High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt of the Philippines concerning a conference on racial questions between himself and the German counsul in Manila, it was learned yesterday.

Informed persons said the German consul's interview with the high commissioner concerned the membership of certain persons of Jewish extraction in the German-American Club of Manila.

Although State and War Department officials declined comment on McNutt's report, it was understood the consul sought removal of Jewish members of the club.

Roosevelt Has Reduced Civil Service in U. S. to 'Subterfuge,' Charges Republican Committee.

The Republican National Committee charged yesterday that President Roosevelt has reduced the merit system in Government "to a mere subterfuge to cover the greatest spoils grab in our history."

"No administration has ever professed greater respect for civil service," said the Republican Reporter," a committee survey. "No administration has done more to exploit it and circumvent it."

The survey said 82.9 per cent of Government employes were under civil service when the President took office, and only 65.6 per cent were covered on December 31, 1937.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—A new oath will face 442,000 registered voters in South Carolina's Democratic primary tomorrow.

The oath, which does not bind voters to support the National nominees of the party in the general election, resulted from an amendment at the last Democratic State convention to Party Rule 32.

The former oath concluded with . . . "and pledge myself to support the nominees of the party, both State and National."

The oath to be used tomorrow reads:

"I do solemnly swear that I am a resident of this club district and am duly qualified to vote at this election according to the rules of the Democratic Party and that I have not voted before at this election and pledge myself to support the nominees of this primary in the ensuing general election."

Senators McAdoo of California and Smith of South Carolina, up for renomination today, are native Southerners and longtime Democratic workers, but there the similarity ends.

McAdoo, tall and slender, is seeking a second term at the age of 74.

Smith, short, stocky and heavily-mustached, is a year younger, but has served five terms in the Senate. Only William E. Borah of Idaho outranks him in service. He is opposed by the Chief Executive.

McAdoo's record of loyalty to Mr. Roosevelt dates back to the Democratic convention in 1932. After the third ballot McAdoo mounted the platform and he shouted that California was swinging to Roosevelt. In the bedlam that followed the New York Governor won the nomination.

Senator Smith has opposed some Roosevelt measures, including the court bill. He said last night, however, he has supported more than 80 per cent of the President's program.

Movie Directors Called 'Laborers' At $6,000 a Week

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Howard Hawks, scholarly appearing motion picture director whose salary is $6,000 a week, today described before a National Labor Relations Board hearing why highly paid men like himself were "laborers" and not "independent contractors."

As a witness for the Screen Directors' Guild, which is demanding studio recognition as sole representative for directors, assistant directors and unit managers, Hawks contended the three groups worked closely together when a picture was in production and that their duties sometimes overlapped.

Hawks explained that assistant directors, whose salaries usually are less than $500 a week, often were entrusted with responsibility of taking some of the most important scenes in a picture.

McAdoo Will Win by 300,000, Says Aide on Eve of Primary

California $30 a Week Pension Sponsor's Manager Asserts His Man Will Pile Up 150,000 Vote Margin; Progressive Race Watched.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 29.—California's hottest primary campaign in years ended tonight with Senator McAdoo's supporters fighting an array of opposition charges and at the same time predicting a majority victory for their Roosevelt-indorsed candidate.

"McAdoo will win the Democratic renomination by a majority of 300,000 over the other candidates," said George Creel, his northern California campaign manager.

But Herbert Smith, manager for Candidate Sheridan Downey, avowed New Deal adherent and $30-a-week pension champion, asserted the ballot tabulations tomorrow night would show a "150,000 plurality" for his man.

McAdoo Must Go.

John W. Preston, New-Dealer-with-reservations contender, who joined with anti-New Deal candidate James W. Mellen in accusing the 74-year-old Senator of permitting a "shakedown" of Federal jobholders for campaign money, said McAdoo "must and will be defeated."

The windup of the nine-sided Democratic race for the governorship nomination, also complicated by the $30-a-week pension issue, found M. Mitchell Bourquin, northern manager for powerful "Liberal" Candidate Culbert L. Olson, predicting victory by 200,000.

Olson qualifiedly indorsed the pension idea. Among other Democratic gubernatorial candidates Representative Dockweiler approved it; Daniel C. Murphy, A. F. L. indorsee; J. F. T. O'Connor, former Comptroller of the Currency, and William Neblett, former McAdoo law partner, opposed it.

Merriam, Hatfield Battle.

Gov. Frank F. Merriam and Lieut. Gov. George Hatfield battled over the Republican nomination for Governor. Merriam stressed economy; Hatfield promised to "clean house."

Ray L. Riley, a veteran State official, and Philip Bancroft, militant farmer, contended for the Republican Senatorial nomination.

All but 2 of 19 incumbent Representatives, most of them New Dealers, sought renomination.

The registration books showed 2,022,726 Democrats, 1,244,402 Republicans, 25,874 Townsendites, who did not offer a full slate, and about 12,000 Progressives.

Woods Search For Lost Nun Finds No Clew

Fear of a mental illness was disclosed last night as the probable reason for the disappearance of Sister Mary Bernadette, partially blind nun, from the Monastery of the Visitation at Alta Vista, Md., as an intensive search for her went into its second day.

Sister Mary, whose secular name is Rose Tschida, had asked for a mental examination, officials of the order explained. The examination showed her to be sound, but she continued to brood over her condition and to fear the mother superior might have her removed from the convent.

CCC Boys Help.

Meanwhile, 100 hot and footsore CCC enrollees from the Garrett Park, Md., camps, completed an all-day search over 4 square miles of dense woods in the vicinity of the convent, on the theory that the 28-year-old woman might have wandered into the forest and been injured after she scaled the 10-foot monastery wall.

Montgomery County police, Chief J. William Garrett and Sergt. James S. McAuliffe planned to continue their investigation by making a thorough check of neighboring towns, where the missing nun might have been seen.

She was described as about five feet six inches tall, slight, weighing about 100 pounds. She is dark-complexioned and, like all Visitation sisters, had closely-cropped hair. When she left the monastery, some time between 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Sunday, she wore the long black habit and white-frilled black bonnet of the order.

A pile of chicken crates, found stacked against the high wall inclosing the four-acre garden at the convent, led to the belief that the nun had climbed the wall and swung to the ground on the other side by grasping the limb of a tree.

Woman in Black Seen.

Yesterday's investigation led to the home of Walter E. Scott, 108 Cedar lane, Bethesda, who told police of seeing a woman in a black dress walk past his house, not far from the convent, at about 4:30 p. m. Sunday. Scott said she seemed to walk with difficulty, stumbling occasionally. A few minutes later he saw her again, this time walking in the direction of the convent.

That the dress worn by the woman was of street length and that Visitation sisters do not own street clothes made it unlikely that she was Sister Mary.

At the convent yesterday, the superior emphasized that Sister Mary would not have been sent away because of her nervous condition. "We tried our level best to keep her here," they said. They said she was happy at the convent, where she lived about seven years.

Free to Leave.

Had she been dissatisfied, her vows would not have precluded her leaving the order and returning to secular life, it was explained.

Great fear was expressed for her safety because of her failing eyesight and her weakened physical condition.

Sister Mary attended mass at 11 a. m. Sunday. Like her 30 sister-nuns, she was free to wander about the walled enclosure, and because of its size she was not missed until 3 p. m., when the sisters were called to tea.

The search began about 8 p. m. Sunday, continued until 3 a. m. yesterday and was resumed after daylight. By 5 p. m. yesterday the entire area within a radius of 2 miles of the convent had been searched.

Roosevelt Sees Morgenthau on Europe Today

Secretary Will Announce Detail of New Financing on Sept. 8.

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, returning to his desk yesterday after a European vacation, indicated that his initial conference with the President today would be in the nature of a report on his activities in Europe.

He declined to discuss observations with respect to the Czechoslovak crisis, although this and the implications of the European monetary crisis are expected to bulk large in his conversations with the President.

The Secretary insisted the Anglo-French-American monetary agreement stood just where it was when he left the United States a month ago.

Asked what was likely to happen if the franc were further devalued, which American and British officials have indicated strong inclination to prevent if possible, the Secretary said he would not attempt to cross that bridge until he came to it.

Morgenthau said details of September 15 financing program would be announced on September 8.

He indicated he did not expect to have sufficient time to go over tax studies which have been pursued in his absence under direction of the retiring undersecretary, Roswell Magill, to be able to discuss them with the President at once.

He said he hadn't heard the subject of war debts mentioned while he was in Europe.

He indicated little concern over increase in gold shipments into the United States. He said machinery in operation for handling the gold problem appeared to be working well and that he did not have any new sterilization program in mind.

GHA Patients To Be Barred At Alexandria

Hospital Chief Explains Ban Due to Overcrowding.

Dr. Clyde West, president of the Alexandria Hospital, announced yesterday the hospital would admit no more Group Health Association patients from the District of Columbia or Maryland.

Dr. West denied, however, that the hospital had refused entrance to John Borjes, 15-year-old paper carrier, who is slowly recovering from the dreaded Rocky Mountain or "spotted" fever at his home, 2805 Twenty-eighth street northwest.

Never Heard of Case.

Commenting on a published report to that effect, he said he had never heard of the case.

"At a recent staff meeting," he explained, "we decided that, since our hospital is a 100-bed hospital, we could only take care of our own people. For that reason, we informed Group Health Association physicians who had applied for permission to practice here that we could only take emergency cases from Virginia."

Group Health Association officials insisted that application had been made at the Alexandria Hospital for admission of young Borjes. They did not "blame the hospital for refusing entrance," however, since refusal was "due to crowded conditions."

"Our attitude toward Group Health," Dr. West declared, "has been pretty much the same as that adopted by the District Medical Society, except that we perhaps have been a little more liberal."

He said the hospital had told Group Health physicians that it would take "emergency cases," and and he emphasized "emergency."

Patient Gaining.

Harry Borjes, an employee of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and a Group Health Association member, said his son "apparently is on the road to recovery."

"I have my fingers crossed," he added "but his fever has been ranging between 99 and 100 in the last few days. It rose once to 107."

Young Borjes has been attended at his home by Group Health physicians and nurses. He was bitten by a tick—the recognized carrier of the disease.

Meanwhile the District Medical Society said that, so far as 1938 is concerned, spotted fever is on the wane in this region. About 40 or 50 cases are reported annually in Virginia and Maryland, the society said, but the disease occurs mainly in the spring. Of 14 cases reported this year in the District, five have died.

Licenses Asked For Lie Detectors

Toronto, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—Dr. Leonarde Keeler, director of the scientific crime detection laboratory of Chicago, believes medico-legal technicians, especially lie-detector operators, should be licensed just as medical men and lawyers are licensed.

Dr. Keeler told 1,000 executives today at the International Police Congress that anyone can purchase a lie detector and that a lie detector in unskilled hands was as unreliable as a fumbling layman seeking a heart condition with a stethoscope.

61,000 More Jobs In July Than June

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—An increase of 144,000 workers in the building construction industry in July over June caused a rise of 61,000 in the number employed in all industries during the same period, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The board estimated the number of unemployed in July at 10,939,000, but said industrial activity continued to show improvement during July and the first three weeks of August.

Security Unit Studies Va. Assistance Law

By the Associated Press.

Experts of the old-age assistance bureau of the Social Security Board had under study yesterday the Virginia public assistance act, preparatory to making a report and recommendation to the board.

The act, passed by the Virginia General Assembly this year, recently was forwarded to the board for formal approval before it becomes operative.

Officials estimated it would be several weeks before the bureau's report reached the board.

U. S. to Market Wheat Below World's Price

100,000,000 Bu. to Be Sold to Exporters Under Subsidy Plan.

Details of the Government's 100,000,000-bushel subsidized wheat export program were unfolded yesterday as Acting Secretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson announced Government purchases will be sold to exporters at a price assuring competition for world markets.

The Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, which will handle the operation, started buying wheat last week at domestic prices. Flour also will be purchased as part of the program and, like wheat, marketed abroad.

"The wheat export program has been adopted as a necessary means of meeting a special situation," Wilson said. "That situation is the fact that up to the present the major nations are not co-operating in a general program for meeting the world surplus program."

Wallace Seeks Canadian Aid.

Secretary Wallace has been in Canada seeking co-operation in subsidized export of wheat. The Canadian wheat board already had launched a similar program. At the least, an informal arrangement for exchange of information is expected to result from the Wallace conferences.

To finance American operations, the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation will draw on customs receipts set aside in the farm act to cover losses, and has arranged to borrow $30,000,000 as a revolving fund from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Wheat purchases by the corporation started Saturday, and will be continued. Some 35,000 bushels already have been acquired. It will be sold to exporters at a price enabling them to meet foreign competition, and losses will be borne by the FSCC.

Bond Is Required.

A bond guaranteeing export of wheat or flour purchased will be required of exporters. In general the plan is modeled after the Canadian method. Offers at less than the price paid by the FSCC will be made for the Government wheat or flour by exporters, based on prices prevailing in the world market. Facilities of the regular wheat and flour trade, including farmer co-operatives, will be utilized in the operation.

With the world wheat crop at record levels, the United States this year is harvesting 956,000,000 bushels. This, with a carry-over of 154,000,000 bushels, would give the United States a vast supply of 1,110,000,000 bushels.

"This export program is for a specific, limited objective of 100,000,000 bushels," Wilson said. "This is all that the program aims to do. Exports of 100,000,000 bushels would be approximately 18 per cent of the estimated world trade in wheat for this season. This compares with about 20 per cent of the world trade that the United States obtained during the past season and with an average share in world wheat exports of approximately 25 per cent during the years 1920 to 1929."

Texas Oil Fields Closed 2 Days in 7 to Cut Output

Austin, Tex., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The Texas Railroad Commission tonight ordered Saturday and Sunday closing of Texas oil fields through the month of September. Daily allowable production on five days a week was set at 1,649,493 barrels. A deduction for the two-day shutdown in each week was computed to result in a basic daily allowable of 1,233,248 barrels in comparison with a present basic allowable production of 1,410,000 barrels.

Secretary Woodring Maps Out Ambitious Program for Army

By the Associated Press.

The Army will have an ambitious program ready for the next Congress Secretary of War Woodring indicated yesterday.

Writing in the Army and Navy Journal's seventy-fifth anniversary number, Woodring said "much remains to be done before we can consider our Army thoroughly modernized," and added:

"It is hoped that future appropriations will make it possible for us to maintain the Army at its full authorized strength in officers and enlisted men and to acquire the latest and best in all types of military equipment."

He continued:

"Our National Guard should have on its rolls at least 210,000 men. (The present strength is 195,000.) We should reach and maintain an aircraft strength of 2,320 modern serviceable military planes within the next two years. (Aircraft strength is now 1,226 'efficient' planes, not counting obsolete ones; and 1,022 new planes are on order.)

"Additional motor vehicles should be produced to provide modern transportation for the greater part of our mobile troops. Our procurement of anti-aircraft artillery should be greatly accelerated.

"Seacoast defenses should be modernized and augmented. Our housing program, now fortunately so well-advanced, should be continued until adequate provision has been made for the comfortable shelter of all our troops."

In another article in the same issue of the Journal, Pershing said industry and business must be ready to mobilize in event of another war involving the United States, warning that a repetition of the industrial unpreparedness of 1917 might be disastrous. The A. E. F. commander also said the American merchant marine is in urgent need of rehabilitation for national defense.

Referring to industry's inability to meet the Nation's military demands in 1917, Pershing said: "We must never again be caught so completely unprepared, and we must remember that any large war will again draw upon all our resources.

"The experience of the past should be preserved for the future. May I suggest that the various leaders and officials in industry record and transmit to generations of officials who will succeed them the knowledge gained by actual experience during war, to the end that we may develop during peace the most efficient methods of mobilizing all industries of the Nation in the event of a future military crisis.

"Looking back upon the war, the requirements for a future contingency can be pretty well foreseen. They include the establishment of plants for manufacturing all sorts of ammunition, and the procurement of the necessary material.

"We must have motor trucks by the thousands, and an abundance of clothing, blankets, food, building material, railroad equipment and implements, telephone and telegraph supplies, medicines, surgical instruments and dressings, and, in fact, practically every commodity which, by the nature of our every day business, Americans are now engaged in manufacturing or distributing.

Utility 'Death' Testimony to Begin Today

SEC to Evaluate Huge Corporation Worth $300,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission was ready last night to begin evaluating the properties of Utilities Power & Light Corporation, reputedly worth $300,000,000, in an effort to enforce for the first time the "death sentence" section of the 1935 public utility holding company law.

After spending nearly all the first day of a hearing on technical preliminaries, Abe Fortas, assistant director of the commissions utilities division, said he would begin testimony today on the value of the corporation's properties.

More than a score of attorneys representing powerful financial and utility interests lined five tables in the front of the hearing room.

They and the entire utility industry watched to see how the commission would use its power to force utility holding companies to simplify their corporate structures and to confine themselves to single, compact areas.

Utilities Power & Light Corporation has properties extending over 13 States. Officials expected it might take months of hearings to determine how that power empire should be divided.

The corporation has headquarters in Chicago and its subsidiaries operate in Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois, Kentucky, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Two of the principal companies represented in the hearings are the Atlas Corporation, huge investment company holding most of the Utilities' debentures, and the Associated Gas & Electric Co., one of the largest holding companies in the country.

Both of these companies have offered plans of financial reorganization and trustees of the Webster Securities Corporation and a committee of preferred stockholders have urged other plans.

La Plata Coroner Holds Drowning of D.C. Man Accident

The death of Harry Payne, 54-year-old Washington man who drowned Saturday in the Potomac River near Rock Point, Md., was held accidental yesterday following an inquest conducted by Judge Thomas I. Farr, coroner of La Plata, Md.

Payne drowned while swimming in deep water off Cobb Bar, 2 miles from Rock Point. He dived from a fishing boat, hired with five companions, swam about 30 yards, and suddenly called for help.

His son-in-law, Elwood Anderson, of 4327 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, jumped from the boat and reached the drowning man. He struggled to hold Payne above water but was dragged under twice, then let go. Near exhaustion, he was pulled from the river by Lee Corbett, colored, owner of the boat.

Payne's body was recovered yesterday.

Madden

factions is extremely jealous of its interests and quick to suspect favoritism for the other."

Indirectly referring to Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, a frequent and vigorous critic of the board, Madden said:

"Will our critic who applied the expression 'shot-gun agreement' to settlements made by the board object to the laying down of the shotguns in Harlan County? Would he prefer that the feud should have continued until either the union or the coal business in Harlan county was prostrate?"

Burke had used the expression "shot-gun agreement" in criticisms of the board's handling of certain cases.

Madden's address came soon after John L. Lewis, U. M. W. and C. I. O. chief, had replied harshly to the charge by William Green, A. F. L. president, that the board's dismissal of complaints against Harlan operators as a result of their agreement with Lewis' United Mine Workers was a "conspiracy" to violate the Wagner act.

Lewis said: "Green's statement is characteristic of what might be expected from any traitorous renegade. The Harlan agreement marks the beginning of industrial peace for the long terrorized and disturbed Harlan mining communities."

Madden fired repeated broadsides at critics who "go on parroting that we always find the employer is wrong." He cited "some 4,000 cases" in which the board had withdrawn or dismissed charges without action against employers "for lack of merit or other causes."

He said: "I ask our critics what they have to suggest as an improvement over our method of eliminating cases which are not well founded, and I ask them, in all decency, not again to mouth or write the falsehood, hundreds of times false, that we proceed against the employers whenever unions request us to do so."

Assails Lip Servers.

Madden sniped sarcastically at persons who accord the principles of the Wagner act "lip commendation," and said:

"Most persons who nowadays make direct attacks upon the freedom of labor to organize do so anonymously through scurrilous pamphlets, or through the manipulation from behind the scenes of those groups of small men whose sense of inferiority is mitigated by their being permitted to have a part in a mob scene."

"But," he added, "even this lip service to the principles of the new law represents enormous progress. Only a few years ago it was the general opinion and the opinion of the courts that there was something so fundamental about an employer's privilege to deprive working people of their living because they joined unions, that this privilege to do injustice and promote strife was guaranteed by the Constitution. In its decisions upholding our law, the Supreme Court has refuted that slander upon the Constitution and we shall never again hear it seriously asserted. This is progress."

Statistics for the board, as of July 1, 1938, when released last night, showed that a total of 16,164 cases has been handled by the board since the fall of 1935. The total involved 3,863,918 workers. The board announced that 12,322 of the cases handled, or more than three-fourths, have been closed, leaving 3,842 cases pending. The breakdown showed:

Fifty-four per cent of the 12,322 cases, or 6,598, were closed by agreement of both parties, involving 1,335,966 workers.

Sixteen per cent, or 1,930 cases involving 261,856 workers, were dismissed by the board and by regional directors.

Twenty-five per cent, or 3,142 cases, involving 695,308 workers were withdrawn.

Five per cent, or 652 cases, involving 208,783 workers, were closed in other ways.

Of the total cases closed, 1,740 were strike cases involving 298,040 workers and of these 1,303, or about 75 per cent, were settled and 196,142 workers were reinstated after strikes and lock-outs. There were 604 threatened strikes averted through board action, the report said. There were 1,401 elections held, in which 482,313 valid votes were cast.

Wagner Studies Changes.

Meantime, Senator Wagner, author of the labor relations act, conferred at Atlantic City yesterday with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor concerning the federation's objections to the act and to the way it is administered. The Senator will report to President Roosevelt today.

The President has indicated he felt certain changes should be made in the act and the Senator's visit, it was understood, was to transmit to the President the American Federation of Labor's specific complaints and recommendations.

William Green, president of the federation, and Joseph A. Padway, general counsel, presented a list of 20 cases in which the board had acted against the federation in favor of the C. I. O.

Senator Wagner's visit had another important connotation. The A. F. of L. had vigorously objected to reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith as a member of the board on the grounds that he was not fitted for the office and that he was prejudiced in favor of the C. I. O.

When Mr. Roosevelt reappointed him, many federation leaders, in private conversations, expressed considerable resentment against the Administration. The Senator's visit and the changes in the act it portends spread some oil on those troubled waters.

Other A. F. of L. leaders were inclined to look on the Senator's visit as a slap at the C. I. O. and John L. Lewis, its chairman. The C. I. O. in general has indicated satisfaction with operation of the act, and has not pressed for important amendments to it.

Sailor Brings Zoo Here Its First Pangolin

Pangolin

When they recovered from their surprise, Frazeur was paid for the pangolin and returned to his ship. He has, meanwhile, learned the creature's species since he had to obtain a permit from the Biological Survey before he could bring it ashore.

"I just fed it milk and egg yolks and green beans, which I had chewed up for it and put through a fine strainer," he told Mr. Walker.

The Zoo specimen is only a "baby." It is about three months old and a foot or so in length. The full-grown animal is from 40 to 45 inches long and weighs from 20 to 30 pounds. The largest specimen on record weighed 42 pounds.

The pangolin has scales which operate something like hinges. Put your finger under one of the scales and it will be severely pinched. It has a snout, an extremely small mouth, and a slimy tongue with which it picks up insects.

It's Prehensile.

It is one of two prehensile animals of the Old World. The other is the binturong, an Asiatic civet.

Walker explained that the London Zoo once had a pangolin for about a year and the Berlin Zoo one for about nine months. The reason they are so rare, he said, is the difficulty of keeping them in captivity.

Natives of southern Asia believe the pangolin catches ants under its scales while feigning to be asleep, then rushes into the water, drowns the ants and eats them. Another belief is that it will answer a call made by a person in the forest, and that anyone whose call is thus answered will meet with disaster. A "hiss," however, is the best it can do in the noise line.

A full-grown pangolin is able to roll up into a ball so tightly that three or four men could not "unwind" it.

Democrats to Shun President's Talk, Md. Editor Claims

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 29.—Aloysius F. King, editor of the 99-year-old St. Mary's Beacon, reported today that an unofficial "stay-away" movement had started since President Roosevelt announced his visit to southern Maryland on behalf of the candidacy of Representative Lewis, New Deal foe of Senator Tydings.

The President, seeking to help Lewis in supposedly pro-Tydings territory, plans to visit Morgantown, Charles County, Sunday to inspect the site of a proposed bridge across the Potomac.

"In 1934," King said, "we invited President Roosevelt to attend our tercentenary celebration—a three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Ark and the Dove and the founding of Maryland. We changed the date so that the President could come. Twenty-five thousand people gathered at St. Mary's City, but the President went fishing.

"Now he is coming into southern Maryland ostensibly to inspect a bridge site, actually to tell us how to vote. We don't like it, and we are dreadfully disappointed in the President, especially those who worked for his election in 1932 and again in 1936.

"Under ordinary circumstances we would heartily welcome our President down here in southern Maryland. As it is, a lot of good Democrats are agreeing to stay away from Morgantown next Sunday."

whether they want to be represented in the Senate by Gov. Olin D. Johnston, to whom the President imparted an election-eve blessing yesterday, or by Senator Smith, whom the President classified as a backward-looking conservative.

The New Deal's power to sway the voters also was being measured in the Connecticut Democratic primaries, caucuses and conventions today, although the President has refrained from taking a direct hand and the efforts of other New Dealers to accomplish the defeat of Senator Augustine Longergan have been half-hearted.

In the battle for delegates to the State convention, Representative Keppleman, of Hartford, and Archibald McNeil, former national committeeman, have been holding themselves out as unquestioning New Dealers and branding Senator Lonergan as "disloyal" because of his opposition to the court reorganization bill.

Odds Against Him.

Outcome of these two Democratic plebiscites may have a bearing on what the President has to say in Maryland next Monday. The defeat of Senator Smith in South Carolina undoubtedly would encourage the President to go all the way down the line against Senator Tydings. Some of the President's advisers believe he will not pull his punches anyway, the argument being that a New Deal defeat in South Carolina would make it all the more imperative that the President exert himself to the utmost to bring about a victory in Maryland.

As the record stands, the President has been victorious in every primary wherein he has asked for return of a New Deal incumbent. But defeating an incumbent, secure in the prestige and patronage that goes with office, the New Deal strategists admit, is something else again.

In primaries where the New Deal candidate was victorious—Senator Barkley in Kentucky; Senator Buckley in Ohio; Senator Caraway in Arkansas, and Senator Thomas in Oklahoma—the odds from the start favored the incumbent. Reports from South Carolina and Georgia, where Senator George is fighting to retain his seat against Lawrence Camp, his New Deal indorsed opponent, indicate that the odds are against the New Deal.

The President's last day here was relatively quiet. This morning he received C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian Parliament who presented a silver model of a Viking ship in commemoration of the first voyage of the Oslofjord, new flagship of the Norwegian American line. The ship was the gift of the World League of Norwegians.

Coal Producers Fight Rail Rate Extension

The National Coal Association filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday a protest against extension of present freight rates on bituminous coal beyond December 31.

The I. C. C. granted temporary increase on caol last October, and the Class 1 railroads have petitioned for an extension. The increases ranged from 3 to 15 cents a ton.

Bastia, Corsica, Aug. 29 (AP).—Three men died yesterday in a feud over a septuagenarian's alleged courtship of an octogenarian's wife.

In the village of Canaje, an 81-year-old native whose name was given only as Mariotti, barricaded himself in his house ofter he was accused of killing a 72-year-old neighbor named Cappelloti, and killed one of the gendarmes besieging him before he, too, was shot to death. Police said Mariotti accused Cappelloti of courting his wife.

Jailed, He Picks Lock To Get Meal, Returns

Hamburg, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—Clarence Brown, 28, told Justice of the Peace Dunmire that he picked a lock, walked out to a restaurant for breakfast today, and then returned to the village jail cell.

"I got pretty hungry and no one came around to feed me, so I picked the lock with a match," the "prisoner" told the court.

The magistrate was so impressed he released Brown without bail pending trial of a disorderly conduct charge, and then called a locksmith to the jail.

several thousand votes even though he no longer is a candidate.

The eyes of the Nation will be turned on tomorrow's voting in South Carolina because it represents the latest test of the famed Democratic Party purge. In a speech in Greenville, August 11, President Roosevelt took a backhand slap at Senator Smith's candidacy, marking him as an early target for the purge.

Beginning the middle of last week, the institute set its field investigators in South Carolina to measuring sentiment on the primary. They covered a scientifically selected cross-section of the State's eligible voters in all income levels, of all ages.

The survey was conducted along the same lines as were used by the institute in its recent survey on the Kentucky primary, in which Senator Barkley's victory was accurately foreshadowed.

Governor a Stepchild.

Following South Carolina's unique political custom, the three candidates for the senatorial nomination have been touring the State together, speaking from the same platform. Senator Smith has repeatedly declared that President Roosevelt's backhand attack on his record was the result of "misinformation." "Gov. Johnston, known throughout the State as the "labor Governor" because of his sponsorship of labor legislation, has not received the direct blessing of the President.

Johnston, however, announced his candidacy for the Senate from the steps of the White House after a conference with the President several months ago. He has pitched his campaign on a "100 per cent for Roosevelt" platform.

Institute surveys are made possible through the sponsorship of 65 leading newspapers.

In Washington its reports are published exclusively by The Post.

Next week and the week after, the Institute will report the results of further surveys on the Democratic Party purge. These will show how Senator Tydings is running in Maryland and Senator George in Georgia.

testimony by George Weinberg and other members of Schultz's mob.

Kearns testified he took a former superintendent of buildings in Manhattan, Weinberg and J. Richard "Dixie" Davis to Mount Vernon and introduced them to Mayor Bateman in 1934, when the gang was seeking the keep the policy banks in Mount Vernon, out of the way of New York police.

Former Mayor Bateman testified to a talk with Weinberg, but said he never remembered meeting "Dixie" Davis. He testified that after consulting his counsel about the nature of the policy business, he declined to entertain the proposition of the policy racketeers, although he was anxious to put jobless Mount Vernon residents to work, and they offered jobs for about a dozen.

Of the four witnesses who accused Hines of being with Schultz in Bridgeport, Hughes said he saw them together first in the lobby of the Barnum, when Hines was walking from the elevator to a stairway, and again in the coffee shop of the hotel, where Hines, he said, was seated at a table with Schultz and Rosenkrantz.

Pucher, headwaiter at the Stratfield, said Hines came into the dining room there one night when Schultz and a party were at dinner and stood talking to the party, under his eye, for about five minutes. Wall, the bellboy, said he ran the elevator one night which took Hines up to Dutch Schultz's room, and again ran the elevator which took the Tammany leader downstairs after his visit.

Corbett, the former fighter, a stumpy little man with a broken nose and one bad ear, said he had been massaging Schultz in his bedroom one day when Rosenkrantz, the gangster's ever-present bodyguard, walked in and asked him to come out and look at a man in the living room. There, he testified, he saw Hines in his undershirt, and admired his fine, strapping figure.

Stryker failed to budge the witnesses or to dent their stories noticeably. In the heat of this cross-examination, during which Dewey interrupted again and again, Dewey cried out: "We know he was in Bridgeport."

"And we know otherwise," Stryker retorted. Justice Pecora admonished the jury not to heed this exchange between counsel.

Policeman Spoils Pickpocket's Fun With Billy der Fun

In a Third Precinct cell last night there was a Philadelphia pickpocket who made the fatal mistake of "dipping" a man's pocket in plain sight of a policeman.

It apparently was not his first mistake for he has done time for the same offense on other occasions. No charges were placed against him here immediately and police said they intend to question him in regard to similar robberies.

Private E. H. Ring, Third Precinct, collared the suspect on a street car at Seventh and F streets northwest yesterday. The victim was Billy der Fun, 27, of 206 H street northwest, who said he had $15 in the wallet the pickpocket took just before Ring seized the latter.

Numbers Slips Holder Held for Grand Jury

Edward J. Thornton, 38, colored, 300 block I street northwest, was held to the grand jury on two lottery charges yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage under $1,500 bond.

Thornton was arrested at Second and H streets northwest by members of the vice squad, who charged he had numbers slips in his possession and charged him with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Navy Would Add 18 Warships, 5,000 Sailors Next Year

The Navy Department, it was disclosed Sunday, has drafted a tentative program for construction of 18 new fighting ships and a number of auxiliaries, for the next session of Congress.

Increase in the enlisted strength of the Navy also will be proposed.

The program for the next fiscal year includes, one or two battleships in addition to the six new capital ships already appropriated for; four cruisers, six destroyers, six to eight submarines; 5,000 more enlisted men, the increase to be spread over the year and bringing the total enlisted strength at the end to 115,000.

Rep. Rankin Flays Cottonseed Trust

Tupelo, Miss., Aug. 29 (AP).—Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, appealed to the Federal Government yesterday to prevent "fixing" of prices by the "cottonseed oil trust."

He telegraphed President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace:

"Cottonseeds selling for about one-third normal value. Price being fixed and controlled by cotton seed oil trust, one of the most powerful and vicious combinations ever organized in restraint of trade."

has in the South, I was then for Roosevelt.

"The fact that you, after observing Roosevelt's personal popularity, swung on to the Administration and now want to tote the torch of Roosevelt in South Carolina does not change your true character.

"The choice now is strictly a matter for the people of South Carolina. I would not presume to dictate to them. The people who know me and believe in me know that I shall vote as my conscience dictates and for the best interest of South Carolina democracy.

"You asked for this statement."

Taking notice of "outside influences" which he said were "being exerted to defeat me," Smith said in a radio address tonight that "I regret the President has seen fit to inject himself into a purely South Carolina political contest.

Johnston Answers.

Johnston, in a radio address tonight, asserted that "a few persons" in South Carolina have become alarmed and are yelling loudly because President Roosevelt, as leader of the Democratic Party, told the people of Georgia that antagonistic Senator George was against the New Deal program and that his opponent was for it.

"And yet these same persons are silent as the grave when Senator George, of Georgia, a man openly indorsed by the Republicans of his own State, used the radio station in Greenville, S. C., to urge the people of South Carolina to vote for the re-election of Senator Smith."

As a climax to the address, Johnston recalled President Roosevelt's visit to Greenville and then turned the microphone over for the presentation of a transcript of Mr. Roosevelt's speech there.

"My conception of a duty of a U. S. Senator is based on the Constitution which divides the Federal Government into three distinct branches . . .

"I do not believe that either branch should be subjected to the domination of the other. Once we destroy our checks and balances in our Federal Government, dictatorship is certain to follow. . . ."

The veteran Senator said "I have done my own thinking and voted on legislation according to the dictates of my own conscience and in the light of the best interests of South Carolina. I have stated throughout the campaign that I did not consider the New Deal an issue because I have supported over 80 per cent of the President's program. . . ."

A vote of about 300,000 was predicted by political students here. The registration is 422,000, a record high.

Polls will close at 4 p. m., except in the larger cities and a few other communities.

Japan's Army 90 Miles From China's Capital

Invaders Seize Key Points; Guerrilla Band Raids Edge of Shanghai.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 30.—Japan's mechanized armies were within 90 miles of China's provisional capital in Hankow today following a new series of crushing blows which resulted in capture of key positions on the north and south shores of the Yangtze River.

The Chinese were contesting every foot of the way, however, and claimed important victories of their own in the salient on the north bank of the Yangtze opposite Japan's advance base in Kiukiang.

[Shanghai, continually threatened by Chinese guerrilla bands, was invaded last night by a band of irregulars who crossed the western border of the city, the Associated Press said.

[The Chinese soldiers came within 2½ miles of the International Settlement's western defense lines, which British troops patrol, and set fire to a highway bridge adjacent to the International Hungjao Golf Club. They hoisted their flag there.

[As Japanese troops dashed to the scene, the irregulars withdrew.

[Foreigners living in the outer portions of the Hungjao district, better-class residential suburb, were menaced directly by this latest guerrilla thrust and they hurriedly evacuated to the International Settlement.—Editor's note.]

Biggest Japanese victory was the capture of strong Chinese positions in Hwoshan, northeast of Hankow, by one of the Japanese columns driving westward to cut the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

U. S. Vessel Isolated.

"Everything is proceeding according to plans," a Japanese army spokesman said, "and we will occupy the entire Wu-han (Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang) area within a few weeks."

Other developments:

Japan rigorously maintained her blockade of the Yangtze River between Wuhu and Kiukiang. The U. S. gunboat Monocacy was isolated three miles below Kiukiang and surrounded by a pontoon barricade to prevent her possible destruction by floating Chinese mines such as those which exploded near her last week.

The Japanese feared a formal protest in Tokyo against the blockade but said they could not lift it because of "military necessity." A British gunboat and British and American merchant ships also were tied up in the blockaded area.

Railways, Airport Bombed.

Two Chinese nationalist terrorists threw hand grenades into the offices of the Tung-Zung-Hong Transportation Co., whose Chinese proprietor had been accused of "co-operating" with the Japanese. Two Chinese were wounded.

In South China Japanese naval planes, despite stormy weather, bombed the big Chinese airdrome at Namyung, on the border of Kwangtung and Kiangsi provinces, and "inflicted heavy damage." The daily bombing of all South China railways was continued by scores of planes and all traffic continued at a standstill.

In North China Japanese columns driving toward Sian, capital of Shensi Province and terminus of the motor-truck munitions line from Soviet Russia, occupied Fenglingtu on the north bank of the Yellow River opposite Tungkwan.

Mines Menace Gunboat.

By the Associated Press.

Navy Department dispatches disclosed yesterday that for four days the U. S. gunboat Monocacy has been in the midst of exploding mines on the upper Yangtze River.

The dispatches said 15 mines have exploded in the neighborhood of the boat. On Saturday two burst simultaneously only 80 yards from the Monocacy's stern.

The department received from the commanding officer of the Monocacy, Lieut. Clarence A. Conlan, San Francisco, a dispatch stating that Kiukiang, on the Yangtze River, where the Monocacy was stationed, the Japanese were engaged in mine sweeping August 24 between Kiukiang and the west end of the south channel. Twelve mines were exploded, ranging 200 yards below the Asiatic Petroleum Co. down the river.

Japanese officers called that day, Lieut. Conlan telegraphed, and said they expected to be minesweeping for three or four years.

Saturday, August 27, Conlan reported, at 10:27 in the morning, a mine was exploded by the Japanese 400 yards off the starboard bow. At 11:35 in the morning the sweeping was finished. The mine sweeping boats then passed up the river.

Lieut. Conlan continued that no ships were under way there or in vicinity when at 1 o'clock in the afternoon two mines beneath the water exploded simultaneously 80 yards from the Monocacy's stern. There was no damage to the hull.

On Sunday, the commanding officer of the Yangtze Patrol of Hankow, Rear Admiral David M. Le Breton, reported that the commanding officer of the Monocacy took up with the Japanese consulate at Kiukiang the matter of possible danger to the Monocacy from exploding mines.

lain policy of "not crossing a bridge until we come to it."

An emergency meeting of the cabinet, to be attended by all but two or three ministers who cannot reach London in time, has been summoned for tomorrow morning to pass upon the wisdom of a personal plan of peace from Chamberlain to Hitler. If Chamberlain's proposal is adopted, as it probably will be, the cabinet will be permitted to scrutinize the wording of the otherwise highly confidential message.

For an hour tonight the prime minister conferred with his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax; the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon; Sir Nevile Henderson, who flew here from Berlin yesterday, and Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the government, who is being recalled from obscurity to give the Chamberlain group the benefit of his years of experience at the foreign office.

After this meeting, Lord Halifax returned alone for another hour's talk with Chamberlain. Between these talks the prime minister was visited by his medical advisers, Lord Horder, and Dr. Bedford Russell for final examination before his departure tomorrow night for Balmoral to attend the King.

Chamberlain, returning at noon from his week-end in the country, conferred during the afternoon with the same men he met again tonight. This morning Lord Halifax and the others, while waiting for the prime minister's homecoming, had a long conference of their own at the foreign office. Rarely has there been so much movement and excitement in Downing street on what should have been a quiet day in August.

Foreign diplomats, following the example of the cabinet ministers, are flocking back to town to get first-hand information as to what is going on. The American Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, cut short a vacation with his family at Cannes and flew to London by way of Paris, arriving tonight. The French Ambassador, Charles Corbin, is due here tomorrow.

The Czech minister, Jan Masaryk, who has remained on the job in London throughout the summer, called at the foreign office this morning and exchanged information with Vansittart.

The three defense departments—admiralty, air force and army—are preoccupied with preparations for any contingency. Under the Anglo-French military alliance, which has been supplemented by general staff talks, certain French air bases have been designated to receive British planes in case of war. This scheme of co-operation is said to have been tested with an unannounced flight of Royal Air Force squadrons to French airdromes last May 21, when German troop movements caused fear Hitler was about to march into Czechoslovakia.

The present German army exercises are on a much larger scale. Sir John Simon's speech last Saturday which reiterated a warning speech in Parliament by Chamberlain last March 24, against bringing on another world war, has not moderated the German attitude. Hence, Chamberlain's inclination to get away from speechmaking and try a personal message to Hitler.

Tomorrow's cabinet will not only pass upon this message, but upon the quetion of enlarging Britain's commitments on the continent. Both Chamberlain and Simon, while warning Germany, refuse to give an automatic commitment to wage war in behalf of Czechoslovakia. A minority within the cabinet is arguing that such warnings are meaningless and empty, unless Britain is willing to make a definite commitment to battle for Czechoslovakia the moment she is invaded.

ing Germany is to the defense of Czechoslovakia.

There is no need for worry, The Bulletin says, that the Sudetenland might be acquired by Germany or any other foreign power.

The Irish, it is contended, became better citizens of the British commonwealth after they were granted independence, and it is intimated in The Bulletin the Sudetens likewise would become better Czech citizens under similar circumstances.

Cool to Prague Offer.

"After centuries of strife and bloodshed over Ireland the English restored complete peace on the basis of common sense and equity," the bulletin continues.

Sudeten leaders received coldly reports that the government's new offer of minority concessions were based on a proposal to establish a system of "kupas" dividing Czechoslovakia into about 20 prefectures or cantons.

There must be local self-government for all Sudetens, they said, and no "piece meal" plan based on the Swiss cantonal system will be acceptable.

Viscount Runciman conferred tonight with President Benes and was reported to have proposed a "round table" conference to iron out differences in the deadlocked minority negotiations.

Americans Confer On Asking Reich's Help for Refugees

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP).—A group of United States diplomats and refugee experts today planned an approach to Germany on ways and means of facilitating evacuation of Jews.

In their first informal exchange of views, Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the International Committee of Refugees; George Rublee, the committee's administrative director, and Hugh R. Wilson, Ambassador to Germany, met at the American Embassy to discuss Germany's attitude toward release of the prospective refugees.

A spokesman said "further preparations" would be undertaken before actual overtures were made to Berlin.

pletely by surprise. Even the burgomaster did not know of Hitler's coming and no preparations had been made to receive him. No Nazi flags adorned the streets and the buildings as is usual when the Fuehrer arrives in a German town.

Nazi guards shut the international bridge across the Rhine and all across the frontier traffic was entirely suspended during the Fuehrer's stay in Kehl. Hitler and his generals spent about an hour inspecting the fortifications on either side of the bridgehead. When the tour of inspection was over, Hitler drove off in the direction of Offenberg.

Although the French foreign office professed optimism in regard to the outcome of the Czech-Sudeten-German problem, it is obviously taking care not to be caught napping by one of Hitler's famous surprise coups during the coming critical fortnight. President Lebrun broke off his summer holiday in remote Vozille to return to Paris. The French cabinet held its first sitting in a month today and devoted three hours to a consideration of the situation in central Europe.

U. S. Ambassadors Confer.

While the Nazi Congress is meeting at Nuremberg next month, the French army will be holding its annual maneuvers at Valdahon, near the Swiss frontier. These maneuvers begin tomorrow. French military airplanes, tanks and mecanized units will play a big role.

America's three "key ambassadors in Europe"—William C. Bullitt of Paris, Joseph P. Kennedy of London and Hugh R. Wilson of Berlin—met in the French capital last night, although it is denied in embassy circles that the meeting had anything to do with the Czech crisis. In these quarters the purpose of their coming together was ascribed to a desire to discuss the German refugee problem with Myron C. Taylor and George Rublee, who happen to be here.

Bullittt and Foreign Minister Bonnet are to deliver speeches at the inauguration of the monument to the American Expeditionary Force in the last World War at Poinse de Grave, next Monday, the day before the Nuremberg Congress meets. Political circles today were speculating whether they would take the occasion to give Hitler a final warning not to apply the match to the European powder magazine.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—The German Foreign Office mouthpiece warned tonight "a latent crisis is threatening to become acute," as Chancellor Hitler made a whirlwind tour of Reich fortifications along the French border.

Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz complained that nothing concrete yet had been done by Czechoslovakia to give Sudeten Germans their rights as it warned of the crisis.

"The Czechs have been handing out programs and assurances for the past 20 years but all they had in common was to confirm them in the power to lord it over other nationality groups," the organ said.

It added that a "crisis isn't solved by one great power crediting the Czechoslovak government with the best of intentions just because it proposed to the Sudetens a new plan concerning which nothing is known."

The paper then went on to urge that "representations concerning the crisis should be directed to those in power to mend matters radically and without delay so they shall not be left under the impression that they have done enough and that anyway they are safe by being backed by great powers.

"Until now, Praha has persisted in the delusion that Czechs in the border regions are and should be lords of the country and that they can behave as such, instead of as what they are—a typical minority," the foreign office mouthpiece concluded.

The Fuehrer's inspection trip was expected to take him from Aachen, near Belgium, to the vicinity of Basel, Switzerland. He touched at Kehl, opposite Strasbourg, France today.

Hitler had with him Gens. Keitel, Von Grauchitsch and Von Reichenau.

The tour began Saturday with but brief public mention. A communique said "during the entire drive he was greeted by troops and the populace with indescribable joy and stormy enthusiasm."

In Berlin, officials fixed attention on tomorrow's British cabinet meeting. The summoning of the British Ambassador, Sir Neville Henderson, from Berlin for conferences with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax prior to the cabinet meeting heightened interest here.

Nazi spokesmen tonight charged Britain had "organized" another dramatic week-end to maneuver Germany into shouldering "any future blame" if negotiations should break down between the Czechoslovak government and its autonomy-seeking minority of Sudeten Germans. Week-end speeches by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, and by Winston Churchill, veteran member of Parliament, contributed to this British game, in the Nazi view.

The authoritative newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, commenting on a forthcoming new Czechoslovak government plan—its third—to appease the Sudeten Germans, said:

"If the proposals give the Germans their rights, then England does not need to threaten with cannon in order to bring us to a more constructive attitude. . . ."

Outspoken criticism of the British warning to Germany, conveyed in Sir John's speech when he said Britain might have to participate in event of war, pervaded all comment.

"The experience of the last few years in war outside Europe does not support the English pessimism," said Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, whose editor is close to the foreign office.

"Or," the paper asked, "are we to read the Simon speech as meaning that England does not want localization?

"No one wants a conflict, and if plan No. 3 (of the Czechoslovak government) gives Germans their rights, no English minister will need to think about such an eventuality."

Yangtze Patrol.

Over a period of many years the United States, in company with several other nations, has enjoyed the right of free movement for its gunboats on the Yangtze River.

Some day that right, together with other special privileges possessed by the treaty powers in China, will be abrogated by mutual consent. Such a development will mark China's political coming-of-age, her capacity to keep order in her own house and to provide adequate protection for foreigners domiciled within her borders. But it is clearly neither to China's interest, nor to the interest of the United States, to abandon this right in favor of Japan.

Yet this, in substance, is precisely what Japan is now demanding, without a shadow of legality. Japanese naval authorities in the Yangtze have refused to permit the American gunboat Monocacy, stationed at Kiukiang, to proceed downstream to Shanghai and have refused to permit another American gunboat, the Oahu, to move upstream to Kiukiang. The Monocacy is thus immobilized in the midst of a heavily mined area.

The excuse given by the Japanese for interfering with the freedom of moment of the Yangtze naval patrol is that because of the war the river is unsafe for navigation. This argument is curious, in view of the fact that the actual fighting is west of Kiukiang with the Japanese presumably in control of the region between Kiukiang and Shanghai. Moreover, the Japanese themselves are using the river to transport troops, supplies, civilians and merchant cargoes.

The presumption, therefore, must be that Japan is merely making her undeclared war a pretext to establish a stranglehold over China's main commercial artery. But whether this is the case or not, the United States has every reason to insist on its treaty right to patrol the Yangtze without interference or approval by Japan. Like the Yangtze at Kiukiang, the Monocacy affair is laden with high explosives.

Population, Unemployment.

Most of our trade, employment and production indices are related to some supposedly normal or unusually active peak year. We are apt to conclude that the country would be in a flourishing condition again could we once more attain the levels of these earlier more prosperous periods. We forget, however, that in the meantime there has been a steady growth in the numbers seeking employment and sharing in the Nation's productive output.

If the country had already arrived at the stage, which students of population trends say is not far distant, when our numbers will become stationary or begin to recede, our trade and production indices would not need to be corrected to allow for the factor of growth. As matters stand, these indices tend to minimize the extent of our plunge into depression.

The National Industrial Conference Board in a recent study of employment conditions reminds us that the problem of finding employment for idle workers is made more difficult by the yearly accession of an estimated 621,000 persons to our potential working forces. The natural growth of population brings a constant stream of young people into the labor market; immigrants swell the influx; and women who in better times would remain in their homes become applicants for work.

Consequently, the absorption of the unemployed at the present time calls for many more jobs than were needed in 1929. If we looked only at employment figures, for instance, conditions would have appeared most satisfactory last September, when almost as many workers were on pay rolls as prior to the depression. Since then, we have added another half million recruits to the list of job seekers and industry has dropped a good many millions because of the business recession. The net result is that the Conference Board estimates that nearly 11,000,000 persons, including those on relief jobs, were unemployed in June.

From this showing it is evident that prosperity for the United States, or any other country in which population continues to grow, cannot be assured by simply maintaining an even level of productive and trade activity. New enterprises must constantly be developed and old ones extended in order to provide means of livelihood for oncoming generations. When we remember that many new wants, and old ones, too, are being satisfied with less expenditure of labor as a result of mechanical inventions and improved organization, the problem of finding useful work for a growing body of employables seems even more formidable than it is generally supposed to be.

The Invasion Of Maryland.

On June 11, in announcing his candidacy for the Senate, Representative David J. Lewis hastened to assert that his campaign would be conducted "by, with and for Marylanders." As for Senator Tydings, observed Mr. Lewis, "I can relieve his beating heart of the fear of the Roosevelt Administration invading Maryland."

There is no doubt that the veteran Congressman from the Sixth Maryland District wanted to fight an independent campaign, without benefit of New Deal intervention. It is on the record that Mr. Lewis told the White House that "I could handle this job myself." And he might well have done so, for "Davy" Lewis is well known and deservedly liked throughout the entire State. As far back as 1916 he successfully took the Democratic nomination away from Senator Blair Lee, though he lost later to his Republican opponent. What Mr. Lewis did then without Administration backing he might also have accomplished against Senator Tydings, whose personal popularity in the State is not exceptional.

But circumstances have been too strong for "Davy" Lewis. Increasingly, throughout an unusually dramatic campaign, the Congressman has subordinated his fine record of courageous independence, has advertised himself as a faithful supporter of President Roosevelt in every executive whim and mood. To Senator Tydings he has voluntarily, even enthusiastically, resigned the credit for being an unfettered spokesman of Maryland Democracy in the upper House.

How this change in Mr. Lewis has come about is interesting—and important. Obviously it is in part due to the will to win on the part of a sturdy little veteran of many a battle of ballots. But in the old days, through session after session of Congress, Mr. Lewis won his House seat by emphasizing his own sterling qualities. He proposed to do the same in this Senatorial campaign. It was his "fitness to represent the people of Maryland" which he stressed last June. Increasingly, since then, he has been advertising his fitness as a Roosevelt "yes-man."

Something of the change in the attitude of Mr. Lewis must be put down to the purely political side of his nature. Maryland, like every other State, has its army of direct beneficiaries of New Deal largesse. To these recipients of benefit checks, on farms and in the cities, Mr. Lewis is making the typical appeal of the day—a vote for me is a vote for continuation of your subsidy.

Something of the change in Mr. Lewis may also be attributed to growing realization of the weight of suburban Washington in Maryland politics. Just over the line, in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, lives an ever-increasing number of Government workers. They are naturally not unsympathetic with the Administration which provides their jobs. For them Mr. Lewis underlines his personal loyalty to the President.

But this is not the whole story. Mr. Lewis, who fought the bonus as resolutely as any man in Congress, is not naturally a truckler to organized pressure groups. Mr. Lewis, who saw the recent political slaughter of William E. Dodd, jr., in the Eighth Virginia District, is too shrewd a politician to regard "a vote for me is a vote for Roosevelt" as being a slogan which satisfies the Democrats of Virginia or Maryland. So it is to factors entirely apart from this candidate that we must look for really satisfactory explanation of the conduct of his campaign.

It is no secret that the President is more anxious to see the defeat of Senator Tydings than is the case with any of the other Democrats who have crossed his imperious will. This is not merely because Mr. Tydings has, from the viewpoint of the Administration, a particularly bad record in the game of follow-my-leader. It is also due to the fact that the Maryland primary, on September 12, precedes that in Georgia by just two days. If Tydings secures the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Maryland his victory will have immediate repercussions in behalf of Senator George, for all that the latter was read out of the party by the President at Barnesville, on August 11.

The purge, which has not been eminently successful to date, will therefore collapse in ruins unless Senator Tydings can be beaten. And if the purge collapses there will go with it a great deal of Mr. Roosevelt's personal prestige, already weakened by his defeat on the court-packing and reorganization bills. Such a blow to his policy of individual leadership the President cannot calmly envisage, certainly not as 1940 begins to loom vividly over the political horizon.

It is for this reason, and not because Congressman Lewis means anything particular at the White House, that the brain trust has for some time been working under forced draft to defeat Tydings; that "smear" stories are being sedulously put out from Washington against this Senator; that pressure is being successfully applied to Federal officeholders in Baltimore; and that the President has now announced the personal invasion of Maryland of which Mr. Lewis, on June 11, said there was no "fear."

That, in essentials, explains why David J. Lewis has been so out of character in this campaign. That explains why, after saying that he would "handle this job myself," he is now scheduled to tag along with Mr. Roosevelt when the Presidential yacht visits Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore next week-end. For those who know "Davy" Lewis it is all very poignant, not less so because by one of those coincidences of politics the President has chosen to "invade" Maryland at the two points where the Lewis candidacy is reported to be making the least headway.

And in the picture there is still another ironic note. It is Gov. Nice, the Republican Governor of Maryland who three years ago called the Administration "totally insane," who has extended the invitation to enter Maryland which the President has accepted, after turning down a similar bid from President Byrd of the University of Maryland. Of course, as Gov. Nice says, he has "nothing whatsoever to do with the Democratic Senatorial primary." Yet Gov. Nice is not without his moments. And in one of them he may easily have figured that a Lewis victory on September 12 would send thousands of Maryland Democrats to the polls to vote Republican two months later.

Still, Gov. Nice only asked the President to inspect the site of the proposed bridge across the Potomac at Morgantown. And Representative Goldsborough has not specified the subject in securing Mr. Roosevelt's agreement to speak at Denton, on the Eastern Shore, on Labor Day. Perhaps the President will not mention the Maryland election in either place. Perhaps he will talk about bridges at Morgantown and about oysters at Denton.

In that case, though the odds against it are long, Representative David J. Lewis will still be able to face the voters of Maryland without blushing during the last week of his campaign.

Extending Social Security.

The ultimate aim of the social security laws is to bring all wage earners into the insurance system, protecting them against want in old age and assisting them to tide over periods of unemployment. As President Roosevelt said in a recent address commemorating the third anniversary of the passage of the act: "To be truly national, a social security program must include all those who need its protections." Today, however, many millions of persons, including domestic servants, farm laborers and casual workers, are not covered by the social security act.

A study dealing with the extension of old-age insurance to these particular classes of workers will soon be completed by the Social Security Board and presented to its advisory council. Until the results of that inquiry are known it would be premature to pass final judgment upon the feasibility from an administrative viewpoint of extending the coverage to workers in uncertain and highly seasonal employment, and to those accustomed to move from place to place and from employer to employer at frequent intervals.

The task of keeping track of a shifting working population is so difficult that Germany and Great Britain, pioneers in the field of social insurance, did not bring domestic servants and farm labor under their respective unemployment insurance systems until many years after the first social insurance laws were passed. In Germany these classes of workers after being included in the unemployment insurance system in 1927, were cast out again in 1938. In Great Britain domestic help is still not insured against unemployment and not until 1936 were agricultural workers brought into a separate insurance system.

It is true that in both countries domestic servants and farm labor were early included in the old-age pension systems, but on the other hand the administrative difficulties of comprehensive old-age insurance are greater in the United States than in European countries, with their more limited areas and more homogeneous and settled working classes.

So far as this country is concerned, it might well prove ill-advised to extend greatly the scope of the insurance system at this time, thereby placing new and heavy burdens upon a comparatively inexperienced administrative agency. It would seem wise, under the circumstances, to defer action until the Board has had ample time to study carefully the problems connected with an expansion of the system. Certainly this is the case if the purpose of the Administration is to maintain direct relief on the present generous scale.

Incredible as it may seem, a man who lives in the mountains of north Georgia declares positively that he has never seen a Roosevelt.

The Government should get up another project at once and have the WPA sprinkle insect powder on jitterbugs.

If you would keep your secrets from your enemies, don't tell them to your friends.

Milk Bottle's Viscissitudes.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

Average span of existence for a milk bottle in the United States is 35 trips to the dairy, it has been determined by the Department of Agriculture. Among dairies that make particular effort to have bottles returned, the average was 51 trips; in other plants, 22. A few old-timers were found to have weathered 91 trips. It would seem that these hardy specimens should be set apart in an effort to develop a more crash-resistant strain of milk bottle.

For the lot of a milk bottle is undoubtedly not always a happy one. There are the hazards of getting brushed off the porch by the family cat, slipping out of the cook's hands in dishwashing, getting jostled off the rear end of the dairy truck, being sequestered in the nursery as a penny bank for Junior or doing duty upside down in the earth as part of a border for a flower bed. All of which, incidentally, adds to the cost of milk. Ordinarily one might say that it was merely a case of the pitcher that went once too often to the well. But that, of course, would never apply in the case of a milk bottle.

Un-American Termites.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I say I am shocked by the attitude of a great newspaper like The Washington Post, as expressed by your editorials and Sidney Olson, of the present investigation of un-American activities. I am surprised that The Post would lend its voice and prestige to the Doubting Thomases and to those "fellow travelers" and Karl Marxes with a deep passion for anonymity who wish to conceal from an unsuspecting public some facts well known to independent observers of our national politics; namely, that our social and governmental structures are being termited from top to bottom by un-American theorists. Quite subtly this is being carried on while the great mass of voters have been lulled to sleep with pacifiers made of Government checks. The specter of a vanishing morale is not permitted to disturb them. And deftly concealed are the kindling fires of alien theories which, if unchecked by an alert citizenry and press, can destroy us tomorrow and make our loved and lively country another Spain. H. B. Maladjusted Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is with much pleasure and great satisfaction that I am a reader of The Washington Post. I have not missed the interesting account of the visit to Washington of Dr. Arthur Bogner, the celebrated psychiatrist of Vienna. Your paper is not only a source of news but also an educational value to its readers.

As one who has been interested in the question of the education of maladjusted children and has studied to some limited extent these problems, may I be permitted to express the sincere hope that Dr. Bogner will locate in Washington and will possibly open a clinic and school for those children who cannot enter the public schools but are not institutional cases.

In my humble opinion, there is no field of education which has been so neglected as that of children who are in the twilight zone between normality and permanent incompetency. From descriptions of Dr. Bogner's work in Europe, he might be able to fill a great need in this country, and your paper will deserve a great deal of credit for bringing him before the public.

CORTLANDT PRESTON CREECH,
Salem College, N. C., Aug. 26.

The Purgees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The question is whether Mr. George (and this applies to Tydings and Smith as well) has voted in the Senate to carry out the recommendations of a Democratic President and in harmony with Democratic Senate leaders, Senator Robinson and Senator Barkley or has voted to carry out the recommendations of a Republican candidate for the nomination for President, Senator Vandenberg, and in harmony with the Republican leader in the Senate, Senator McNary. Whether he has voted with such liberals as Pope of Idaho, Pepper of Florida and Norris of Nebraska or with such reactionaries as Dickinson of Iowa, Austin of Vermont and Bridges of New Hampshire.

In South Carolina where Senator Smith vociferously asserts "I'm not riding on anybody's coattails." Yet for a quarter of a century Senator Smith has rode into Congress on the coattails of the founders of the Democratic party and of Jefferson Davis. If Smith had run simply on his brains and not on Democratic party coattails, he would have been one more forgotten man long ago but as a coattail rider he is a Senator. Funny isn't it?

Perhaps the most laughable phase of the matter is the white hot indignation with which George, Tydings and O'Connor attack the President for attempting to dictate to the people, apparently believing the smoke of their anger will obscure the charge that they are unworthy servants of the cause of democracy. It might not be as laughable but it would be better sportsmanship if instead of attacking the President's right to criticize, they would answer the criticism.

HARRY B. FLEHARTY.
Washington, Aug. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to add my bit to the senseless controversy raging anent the "Presidential Purge."

Briefly, this is how the matter appears to me: If the leader of an orchestra finds that some of his men cannot, or will not, play in tune and time with the rest of the orchestra, he owes it to the public (the people) to get rid of those men and replace them with others more capable and willing. To Combat Subversiveness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Common Sense and Justice" commenting on the successful negotiations in New York that insures a fair percentage of clerical employment to colored citizens in stores where they predominate as patrons, is encouraging because of its fairness and that it is inspirational to progress along these same lines.

Your editorial also stressed the conservative leadership of the colored citizens in New York and the thorough organization and planning of their campaign.

Students of our group now realize that subversive movements using radical methods have made no permanent inroads into our masses. In spite of the discriminations and often persecutions we periodically endure, our group remains sane in its faith in God and the fairness of the vast majority of the citizens of this country. Americans are learning the value of its most loyal and largest minority group. Throughout American history colored citizens have fought in its wars and their martyrs have given their all that America might live.

The leaders of business will perform a patriotic service by giving employment to qualified colored citizens, as it will help their leaders combat subversive influences. America needs more markets, preferably home markets. To help 12,000,000 colored citizens of America raise their economic status will hasten the return of prosperity to our land.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.
Washington, Aug. 18.

Vae Victis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this persistent clamor about broken treaties? Varsailles, St. Germain, Locarno? They were all made under duress; no free, self-respecting nation would have signed them otherwise. All obligations on one side and none on the other!

Almost 20 years ago, the so-called high contracting powers, crazed with victory and hatred, solemnly agreed to enslave the German people for generations hereafter. Their leaders, Tiger Clemenceau, Lloyd George, Woodrow Wilson, Orlando, with the help of two dozen or more little nations, after deliberating for eight months (first putting right after Armistice Day the worst hunger blockade on Germany the world has ever witnessed so as to make the Germans sign anything desired) called in the German delegation to sign on the dotted line.

Count Rantzau emphatically refused to sign these impossible proposals and dictations! The second delegation stated, "We only sign these to save our people from more starvation."

David Lloyd George, not satisfied with this alone, wanted to hang the Kaiser for starting the war. The same Lloyd George (after learning for ten years, and sane again) stated in "The Pester Lloyd" Budapest, 1929: "It is ridiculous to say the Kaiser planned and started the World War. The Kaiser was in Norway on a vacation, and his war minister on leave of absence."

Lord Stanhope, British undersecretary in foreign affairs, said in Parliament two years ago, "Lloyd George helped to wreck Versailles, (which he was mainly instrumental in making) as every intelligent person knows now, this insane treaty should never have been made." The Rev. Richard Lee, C. O. P. Glasgow, said in London, Foreign Affairs, 1925, "The vile and unjust deeds of Versailles must be undone; the undoing of them is the only way to a lasting peace. Only in the will to justice is the world's peace to be found." PETER SCHNOOR.

Pets And The Playgrounds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is the object in having dog and cat shows on our playgrounds? No mother that loves her child will send or take it to a playground to play in dog and cat filth or a chance of being bitten by a dog. Congress appropriated money to operate playgrounds for children and people, not dogs and cats.

Why not have flower shows? Train the children to take care of window boxes. Every playground should have a flower garden. Also plant shade trees. It won't cost any more to grow shade trees for playgrounds and school lawns than it does for streets and parks. Under the shade trees place seats for mothers who take their children to the playground. Build slides, the old cellar door type. They are inexpensive and safer and more fun. This will remove the present habit of children opening up big cardboard boxes and sliding down the terraces three or four abreast. They are just ruining the terraces at our schools.

Also an outdoor skating rink, lighted at night for older children. There could be a bicycle track on the outside of the skating rink fence and seats on the side of the rink for parents. We are not providing the things children want most to do. That is why they are on the streets and do damage to property and school lawns. Children could be trained to love flowers and beautiful clean lawns, if a gardener and a nature instructor were employed on every playground instead of these "dog-minded people."

Every playground should have a flag committee. Let older boys serve on this committee. Ask the citizens' association to appoint a man as chairman for the flag committee. The boys would observe the condition of flags in their community and report to the chairman any worn or unsightly flag flying. Then the citizens could call on the party flying the flag to replace it with a new one. This will have a good influence on the boys and give them a chance to do something worthwhile.

The aim of my committee is to train children and people to think of the difference in playgrounds and school lawns. When going to and from the playgrounds walk up and down the concrete walk and steps. At no time run or play on the school lawns. I hope in the future the playground instructors will prohibit the dogs and cats from the school lawns and playgrounds and help create a civic pride. It is not necessary to do destruction in order to have a good time. What intelligent mother will give a boy a hammer, saw and nails and turn him loose on her furniture instead of a box and boards in the yard? Why ask children to bring a filthy, destructive dog on our playgrounds? A few music instructors would be a fine thing. One evening each week have community singing at each playground.

The Post Impressionist

Neighborhood Show.

AT 6 P. M. the lights on the marquee will blaze life. But now, solitary, or knotted into family groups we stand patiently, waiting for the moments when the lobby doors will be unlocked. Traffic crashes in tremendous waves behind us. The chain drug stores on the corners are swallowing and disgorging people, but we are quite apart from all of that.

We have snatched a hasty bite before leaving home so we are placid in body and mind as the clock moves forward. Others may dine in leisure, lingering over the salad or the dessert, but we are content to forego that for the pleasure of the first show.

Now it is 6 o'clock and our vigil is over. An usher hurries to the doors and begins fumbling with the locks. Inside we can see the girl in the box office counting her change, sorting it into the proper grooves. We troop inside. There is no pushing or shoving, long custom having bred a tolerance and courtesy among us.

We file past the pretty cashier in the bright glass cage, exchanging our quarters for a tiny bit of pasteboard. For some this ticket means an escape from reality, for others an escape into reality. Each of us is to get the medicine he needs—a sedative or a stimulant.

Once inside, we make a bee line for our favorite seats. For each habitue there is one particular spot that is his by conquest and long usage. The little boys flow to the front row like rain rolling off a roof. No one disputes their right to it. Each of us, wrapped in darkness and comfort, lifts an untroubled face to the magical sheet before us.

Small girls fill up the fourth and fifth rows. Whether this is by choice or because thus early they recognize the might of the male and acknowledge his droit du seigneur as lord of creation it is hard to say. They sit less quietly than the boys, bobbing up and down like gay balloons, giggling, and leaning forward in huddles to hear some important secret.

Two elderly sisters have a claim on a pair of seats midway down the center section. They arrive with a bustling of wraps and tapping of canes, soft scarves around their throats and old-fashioned fans dangling from their wrists. They are lovely, like scraps of old silk, and, like Gaston and Alphonse, they are solicitous of each other's comfort.

"You go first, Ella; wherever you choose will be all right with me."

"No, you go first, sister Kate; I'm sure you're more to be suited than I am."

There is a tiny rustle like that of a handful of dry leaves. Sometimes sister Ella is victorious, and sister Kate leads the way down the aisle. At other times sister Kate has it her way and sister Ella taps in the van. Once installed in their regular seats, sister Kate will lean forward:

"Are you comfortable, Ella? We can move if you're not, you know." Sister Ella settles herself firmly into her familiar place and replies:

"Can you see and hear from here, Kate? Are you sure you are not too far back?"

After deciding that these seats that they have occupied with clock-like regularity for the past 15 years are as suitable as any, they adjust their scarves and other belongings and subside.

The big man and the little woman sit far back on the right outside aisle. They came in together, he huge as a battleship in the lead, she tiny as a frail canoe bobbing behind. His progress toward this spot is a veritable walkover; ushers are brushed aside and patrons who might have had their eyes on the seats are brushed away. Then he wedges in, stretches his long legs. The woman is infinitesimal beside him. She is near-sighted and it is plain to all that she should be seated nearer the screen, but the big man is one of those in whose presence the rest of us are Casper Milquetoasts.

The lonely lady is among the earliest arrivals. She makes directly for the far left and chooses her seat on the last outside aisle. This section is always the last in any theater to fill, and on nights when the crowd is thin, she appears like a dim jewel in the ring of empty seats.

We wear no inhibitions in our theater. We cheer and clap and sometimes when the story oozes pathos we blubber unashamed. But if our emotions are less shackled than those of audiences in the big shows downtown, we are more circumscribed in other ways. We seldom crunch hard candies or crackle cellophane. Perhaps this is because we did have a bite before leaving home; perhaps because we care for only one pleasure at a time.

And now it is time for the picture. The lights go off and the great curtain sways jauntily as it parts across the screen. Heralded by music, the trade mark of a producer looms, magnetizing us with its portent. The hush falls; sentences and even words break. Are left unsaid. Arms on rests, faces lifted, we settle down.

LAURIE HAVRON.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Cronin Case.

JIMMY ROOSEVELT has dropped the other shoe in the second and last installment of his story in Collier's without mentioning the Cronin insurance case in Boston. This is a very interesting case. In the Cronin suit it has been shown that the American Tobacco Co. placed a deposit of $2,000,000 in the National Shawmut Bank of Boston and that in the course of time one of the insurance firms in which Jimmy was interested received a huge insurance order from the bank. The commission was about $40,000 a year.

The matter naturally calls attention to Jimmy's indignant denial that he would trade on the place which his father occupies. It also emphasizes his admission that he requested that George Washington Hill, the president of American Tobacco, be given special treatment on a visit to Jimmy's father at Warm Springs, Ga., as a means of promoting his insurance business.

• • • •

JIMMY did write a $2,500,000 policy on Mr. Hill's life, but he explains that this was closed five months before Mr. Hill's visit to Warm Springs. On November 29, 1932, he learned that Mr. Hill was to visit Franklin D. Roosevelt, and regarding Mr. Hill as "the possible source of more business (which he never got)," he sent a wire to Miss Marguerite Le Hand, the secretary to the President-elect.

"George W. Hill, president American Tobacco Co., and Vice President Paul Hahn, as you know, arrive Warm Springs Thursday morning," the telegram said. "I am trying not to ask many favors, but will greatly appreciate it if you would take especially good care of both of them, because it is important in a business way to me."

Jimmy admits that he sent this message for the purpose revealed in the telegram, but seems to resent any suggestion that it was sent for the very purpose which is stated in the message itself. He bases his resentment on the fact that the big life policy already had been written and the fact that the further business which he had then in mind did not develop.

• • • •

IN AUGUST, 1933, however, nine months after the visit to Warm Springs on which Jimmy bespoke "especially good care" for the two officials of the American Tobacco Co., that company deposited $2,000,000 in the Shawmutt bank.

And in the fall of 1934 the bank placed the big insurance order through O'Brion, Russell, with whom Jimmy Roosevelt himself states that his firm of Roosevelt & Sergeant is associated on a 50-50 basis. Jimmy is mentioned in the testimony and in the arguments before F. Delano Putnam, the auditor, or referee, of the Superior Court in Boston.

According to the record, one official of the bank admitted that his purpose was to throw the commission on the insurance to O'Brion, Russell, Jimmy's associates, and take it away from the plaintiff in the suit, Arthur D. Cronin. Another bank official, after long hedging to avoid a direct answer, finally answered the question: "Weren't you interested in having James Roosevelt get a commission?" with the words: "Yes, sure; I wanted him to get the business."

• • • •

MR. CRONIN is suing on his claim that he did the spade work on a very difficult job and that the business was arbitrarily given to the associates of Jimmy Roosevelt. The decision, however, may have no direct bearing on Jimmy's situation because the defense relies mainly on a simple denial that Mr. Cronin had a contract with the bank. Cronin's counsel contended that the policy as finally placed was substantially the same proposition on which he had expended much time and energy.

Although Jimmy scornfully denies that he would trade upon the place which his father occupies, these facts remain:

1. He did bespeak "especially good care" for a visitor to the President-elect of the United States "because it is important to me in a business way."

2. The visitor did deposit $2,000,000 in the bank.

3. And the bank did eliminate from the insurance deal a man who had worked up the proposition and gave the business to Jimmy's associates.

Cause and effect are not here apportioned. Jimmy has appealed to public opinion, but in presenting his case to that tribunal he neglected to mention the Cronin case.

Federal Workers Lose Extra Pay For Labor Day

Extra pay is lost to Government Printing Office employes who are to work on Labor Day and a ruling from the acting Comptroller General strikes out the gratuity feature from all other holidays, whether designated by Federal statute or Executive order.

The Public Printer asked the ruling from the Comptroller General. It was debatable whether the employes who will work on the Labor Day holiday could have an extra day's pay in accordance with an act of Congress of June, 1895. It was ruled that the 1895 act was rendered inoperative by a joint resolution passed last June. The War Department was similarly notified by the acting Comptroller General last week.

2 Contracts Let for Army Airplane Instruments

Acting Secretary of War Johnson announced yesterday award of two contracts, totaling $512,450, for instruments for new planes and to replace obsolete equipment.

One award for $375,600 went to the Sperry Gyroscope Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., and the second, for $135,850, was given to the Kollsman Instrument Co., Elmhurst, N. Y.

Dies Defends Inquiry From Press 'Attacks'

Denies Shirley Temple Was Pictured as Red; Hits 'So-called Liberals.'

By the United Press.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House committee investigating un-American activities, last night defended his group against "union busting" and "red baiting" criticism and denied that Shirley Temple was pictured as a Communist at recent hearings.

In a Nation-wide radio address he renewed his attack on the Department of Justice and the Labor Department for alleged failure to co-operate with the committee by assigning clerks and investigators to compile evidence.

He reviewed much of the testimony at initial hearings, but emphasized no definite conclusions had been reached by the committee, nor would any be reached, until all evidence is in. Several sub-committees are gathering evidence in various sections of the country at present.

To "Expose Nazis and Fascists.

Denying charges the committee concentrated its opening inquiries on activities of the Communist Party in the United States and purposely ignored Fascist and Nazi movements, he said:

"We are going to investigate and expose the Nazi and Fascist movements in this country as thoroughly as we do the communistic movement."

He pointed out that certain evidence relating to the German-American Bund already had been heard by the committee.

Success or failure of the investigation will depend largely on the degree of co-operation extended by various Government departments in accordance with the resolution creating the committee, he said. It also will depend, he added, on extent to which "certain forces" in the United States can divert the public's attention from the important facts of the investigation through the "strategy of ridicule, misrepresentation and false reports."

Hits "Liberal Columnists."

Regarding the Shirley Temple episode, Dies said several "so-called liberal columnists" had seized it in an attempt to discredit the committee's work. Far from depicting Shirley as a Communist, he said, the testimony of Dr. J. B. Matthews only tended to show that the child movie star had unwittingly lent herself to propaganda of the Communist Party by sending hearty greetings to the purportedly communistic French newspaper, Le Soir.

Again assailing the "so-called liberal columnists," whom he did not name, Dies said the "overwhelming majority of newspapers, columnists and reporters have been extremely fair and accurate." If the testimony and documentary evidence presented to the committee is to be refuted and disproved, it must be done by facts and not ridicule, he added.

"In spite of the tremendous handicaps under which we are laboring, due to insufficient funds and a wholly inadequate staff of investigators, clerks and other assistants—in spite of what appears to be a well-organized effort to discredit the committee by false and malicious reports with respect to testimony of witnesses and the attitude of the members of the committee, and attacks upon investigators, and in spite of what appears to be an effort to sabotage the whole investigation by the well-known tactics of those who fear the disclosures, we are determined to proceed as dilligently and as thoroughly as our limited funds and inadequate personnel will permit," he said.

Industrial Loans Drop $10,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by banks in 101 leading cities declined $10,000,000 to $3,890,000,000 in the week ended August 24.

Officials said, however, the trend of business loans appeared to be definitely upward and that apparently liquidation of a few large loans was responsible for the decrease.

In New York City, commercial and industrial loans increased $10,000,000. In the Chicago Federal district, however, similar loans declined $7,000,000 and in the Boston district they fell $4,000,000.

Phosphate Lands Bought for $680,000; U. S. Firm Paid $148,000.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 29.—A joint Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority decided today to investigate deeply into a special report of the Federal General Accounting Office, the nature of which has been closely guarded, on the Authority's phosphate purchases.

It was disclosed recently phosphate lands in middle Tennessee had been purchased for $680,000 from the International Agricultural Corporation, of New York, which had bought the lands only a few years before for $148,000.

Although TVA witnesses justified this purchase as "good business" and indicated deferment might have necessitated paying even a higher price, Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, insisted upon further inquiry, and brought up the fact that the General Accounting Office in Washington made a special study which has been in the files of the investigating committee for three weeks.

Last week, James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, asked that TVA be given access to it to make exceptions and explanations. Wolverton and Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, vigorously objected.

Dr. A. E. Morgan, deposed TVA chairman, returned to the stand to tell the committee that establishment of Authoriy headquarers at Muscle Shoals, Ala., would have meant "the sacrifice of many values."

A letter and brief from Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, was introduced urging the committee to inquire into maintenance of actual headquarters at Knoxville although "dummy" headquarters are kept at Muscle Shoals.

The former TVA chairman said he had been advised "by the best authorities available" that a clause in the TVA statute naming Muscle Shoals as headquarters "was only a legal phrase" and did not force the Authority to abide by that rule.

The Crisis Deepens

By Barnet Nover

Nearing A Showdown In Europe?

EUROPE'S crisis grows from day to day, almost from hour to hour. There is no mistaking its intensity, no minimizing its dangers. For while it is not inevitable that the continent should be plunged into war at this time there is also no certainty that the catastrophe will be averted.

There have been a great succession of crises during the past few years. Not all of them have been free of blood-letting. But the world has somehow managed to survive them without getting mixed up in a general conflict. Until now the peaceful powers have been in a position to permit small wars in order to prevent a big one. Until now it has been possible for them to make sacrifices for peace without sacrificing peace itself. Until now there has been an area of maneuver in that twilight zone between peace and war.

• • • •

ALL THAT is past. Czechoslovakia is not Ethiopia, or Austria, or Spain. Its strategic importance is such that its disappearance would directly and immediately imperil the safety of France and Soviet Russia, not to mention Rumania, Yugoslavia and other nations. And Czechoslovakia's own capacity and readiness to fight for the maintenance of its independence is such as to make it impossible for the Reich to destroy the republic without a war.

Hitherto Great Britain has acted on the theory that the dispute between the Prague government and the Third Reich was one that simply involved the question of German minority rights in Czechoslovakia. That is why British statesmen have constantly put pressure on Czechoslovakia to widen the scope of her concessions to Henlein and his followers. For by means of such concessions, it was believed in London, the Nazi grievances against the Prague government would cease having any substance, Germany and Czechoslovakia could then live at peace and Europe would be able to breathe easier.

THIS THEORY has proved to be without substance. Premier Hodza and his colleagues at Prague have offered every concessions to the Sudeten Nazis consistent with the maintenance of Czechoslovakia as an independent nation. These offers Henlein has spurned. He—or rather Hitler whose puppet he is—does not want concessions; he wants capitulation. And this, of course, the Czechoslovak government cannot grant.

It was partly in the hope that through another turn of the screw additional concessions could be squeezed out of Czechoslovakia to bridge the gap between the Prague government and the Third Reich that Lord Runciman was sent on his mission. Moreover, it was believed in London, the presence of Runciman in Czechoslovakia would prevent any overt attack by Germany. During the ensuing delay the forces of conciliation in Europe would thus have another inning possibly enabling them to patch up some kind of a settlement.

THE STRATEGY would have had much to recommend it were it not for two factors. One is the circumstance that Germany has reached the peak of her industrial boom, as the recent drastic collapse of security values on the Berlin bourse clearly suggests.

From now on it will be increasingly difficult for the Third Reich, without expanding territorially, to keep up the back-breaking pace she has pursued in the past. The law of diminishing returns is beginning to operate. At the same time the peace-loving nations, though not without heart-burnings and hesitations, are drawing together. Collectively their strength is infinitely greater than that of Germany plus any and all nations prepared to follow her lead.

Time, therefore, fights against Germany both on the home and foreign grounds. No wonder, then, that the feeling has grown in certain Nazi quarters that if Germany is to achieve her program in central and eastern Europe she must do so quickly. And the greatest barrier in the path of the Third Reich's hegemony is Czechoslovakia, which, moreover, is a veritable gold mine of resources which Germany so desperately needs.

LAST MAY Germany sought to intimidate the Czechs by means of a bluff. She failed to do so. Possibly Hitler is bluffing again, with his large-scale mobilization of Germany's armed forces, the frenzied fort-building on the western border, the intense campaign of abuse against Czechoslovakia and, last but not least, the recent order to the Sudeten Nazis practically inviting them to begin a civil war. The chances are at least as great, however, that this time, Hitler is not bluffing; that, come what may, he will try to get by force what he may fail to get by threats of force.

Not surprisingly the British are alarmed. They see the whole flimsy structure of attempted conciliation which the Chamberlain government has sought to erect during the past year falling down on their heads. Mussolini has made it clear to them, through Gen. Franco, that a victory in Spain is more important to him than a pact with Great Britain. Now they are discovering that the fear of losing Britain's good will may not deter Hitler from going after his objectives in Czechoslovakia.

At long last the veil is being drawn from their eyes. Solemn words are being pronounced at London, by Sir John Simon and others, and these words are accompanied by solemn measures such as the concentration of the home fleet in the North Sea. It may be too late. Let us hope it is not.

The Joiner's Perplexity.

(After reading the Dies committee testimony of Russian influence behind so many American organizations.)

I am worried and a little apprehensive—
I am shocked, chagrined and rather fearful, too;
For it puts me in a mood that's quite defensive,
And if you're a joiner, it's the same with you.
Oh, I've joined so many big associations—
(I'm a joiner to the very manner bred)—
That I wonder as I hear the revelations

II.

How I felt when I was asked to be a member
Of the U. S. League for Self-Affixing Wings!
And I didn't know until the next September
It was one of Mr. Stalin's little things;
How I rushed to be enrolled, my features glowing,
In the Brotherhood for Perfect Peace, so nice!
There was not at any time a way of knowing
Crafty Moscow thqught it had me on the ice.

III.

There's the League for Cultivating Young Canaries—
I was in it from the very, very first—
And the Guild for the Development of Berries
And the Order of the Cultivated Thirst—
There's the International Confederation
For Improvement of the Ethical, and such . . .
I enlisted, but, oh, what exasperation
If the probers find it has the Russian touch!

IV.

To a bridge club I go almost every Monday
And 'til now it never has occurred to me
That a Washington committee will on one day
Find that Moscow is behind it secretly;
I just joined a golf club hotsy-totsy—
On the surface it appears to me all right—
But it may have found its origin with Trotsky
And the very thought of this fills me with fright.

V.

I just love to go to big impressive dinners
And to mingle with the influential there;
Tho a lot of them are stuffed-shirt double-chinners,
To be seen with them gives me a certain air;
Oh, the countless public dinners I've attended
And the many kinds of soup that I have had!
Heavens! Was I with "United Fronters" blended
As I listened to those speeches dull and bad?

VI.

I'm a member of the League for Better Custard
And the Guild for Chicken in the Chicken Pie,
I have joined the Club Opposed to English Mustard
And the Guild to Teach the Orphans How to Fly;
Heaven knows the total orders I belong to—
At most any kind of membership I snap—
Now I have a guilty feeling that it's wrong to;
How I fear that I've been taken as a sap!

Explanation.

We are hearing from London that the trade treaty negotiations between Great Britain and the United States look like failing. Simultaneously, though perhaps not in anyway connected, we are hearing talk in responsible British circles of making belated payments on the British war debt to the United States with a view to improving good feeling between the two peoples.

If there is any connection between these two topics of conversation, it is to be feared that our brothers in the British Isles still lack a real understanding of the psychology of our very good cousins in the United States. Should there be a hitch in the trade negotiations, it is not in the remotest degree due to any ill feeling among the American people because the British have left unsatisfied certain war debts which now reach astronomical proportions. The hitch comes because influential American manufacturers and traders serve vigorous notice in Washington that they simply will not stand for certain proposed forms of British competition—and this is election year across the border.

The "Net Addition"

By Mark Sullivan

Feeding The Hungry.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE feeds the hungry. He does it hurriedly, almost desperately. But compassion is not the motive that makes him so energetic. He does not set out primarily to feed the hungry—that is an incident of another purpose. To feed the hungry is the job of the State relief agencies. But after the State agencies have given the hungry the regular allowance, Mr. Wallace comes along and gives them more. No doubt the hungry don't get any more than enough, even with Mr. Wallace's contribution thrown in.

But one wonders just why Mr. Wallace feeds the hungry. Why is he so eager to give away food? He looks for opportunities to give it away. Recently he ordered his subordinates to:

"Make a thorough survey of the situation in each of the 48 states to determine whether additional supplies of farm rops beyond those now being consumed are needed to keep the families of unemployed workers adequately nourished . . ."

Mr. Wallace is careful to say that the food he gives the unemployed is something extra. He underscores the word "net addition" in the following announcement:

"We must be sure that any surplus commodities supplied to families on relief, are, insofar as possible, a net addition to the amounts already being consumed."

Again, in an announcement about giving wheat products to unemployed persons, Mr. Wallace directs:

"State agencies are required to distribute the products to relief families in addition to, and not in substitution for, commodities which they already buy or receive locally."

• • • •

PLAINLY, Mr. Wallace is extremely eager to give away food. If we seek the reason for his eagerness, we find it in the opening words of one of his announcements: "In view of the existing surpluses of many farm commodities . . ."

That's the answer. It isn't the hungry that make Mr. Wallace anxious—it's the surpluses of farm crops. Mr. Wallace wants a way to get rid of those surpluses. He wants—and this is his real purpose and his real anxiety—he wants to keep the prices of farm crops up. Mr. Wallace, with Government money, buys the surplus commodities from farmers, dealers, and processors. He does not do his buying in such a way as to get it at the lowest price available. Not at all. He does it in such a way as to keep the price up. Indeed, he does most of his buying for the precise purpose of keeping prices up. To the farmers the prices of crops are not high, they are low. They are much lower than Mr. Wallace five years ago promised they would be. They would be yet lower than they are if Mr. Wallace did not do all his buying.

Mr. Wallace, in his buying, does not use the phrase "keep prices up." He uses such phrases as "improve market conditions." For example, AAA, announcing purchases of fruits, vegetables, and flour, says: "These products will be bought when prices are low to help improve market conditions." Again, AAA announces it will buy fresh snap beans: "The purchases will be made to help market conditions when prices are low." In one announcement, AAA gives the whole story away:

"The purchase of commodities distributed for relief use by the welfare agencies were made by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to remove surpluses and to help farmers improve selling conditions."

IF AAA and Mr. Wallace were candid they would say something like this: "We want to keep the prices of crops up. In order to keep prices up, we go into the market and buy. In order to get rid of what we buy, we give it away to relief agencies." If there were no persons on relief for Mr. Wallace to give his surpluses too, he would be embarrassed.

The situation is part of the breakdown of the whole farm program, of the whole New Deal planning, of the whole promise of "balanced production." The promise was twofold. Farmers were to get adequate prices for their crops. At the same time labor was to get so much employment, and with wages at such a level that they could pay the adequate prices for food that the farmers were to receive. But after five years, prices of farm crops are about where they were. Unemployment is about where it was. And in desperation Mr. Wallace is driven to the awkward expedient of buying crops at prices higher than they would otherwise be, and giving the food away to persons who have no wages with which to buy.

Battle On Labor Act

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Editor's note: This is the first of a series of five articles on the coming Congressional struggle over amendments to the Wagner national labor relations law. It states the situation and presents an abstract of the law's principal provisions, as interpreted by the National Labor Relations Board. Subsequent articles will present the viewpoints of the three factions involved—the employers, the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization. The fifth will summarize the arguments and discuss the implications of the study of the British labor laws initiated by President Roosevelt.

FOUR MONTHS before Congress convenes, the big battle of the coming session is rapidly developing.

President Roosevelt has said that the Wagner national labor relations act needs amending. Opening that law to revision obviously means a three-way struggle which could easily prove the most bitter since the President's court reorganization bill was defeated.

Even this far in advance, there is no doubt that the contest will find:

The bulk of industry, in one camp, demanding greater protection for the employers and restrictions upon union activities;

The American Federation of Labor, in a second, insisting upon strong and specific safeguards for the collective bargaining rights of its craft unions, rivals of the industry-wide unions of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

And in the third camp, unquestionably, will be John L. Lewis and his C. I. O., vigorously and vehemently opposing any changes in the law first of all, but ready, if revision is attempted, to present and urge their own amendments, based largely upon the record of Senator La Follette's investigation of anti-union tactics which the Wagner act has not prevented.

IT SEEMS CLEAR that a fourth party to the controversy, the National Labor Relations Board, target of the denunciations of industrial leaders and the federation alike, will oppose amendments also. Its members are taking no part in the controversy, but privately they make no secret of the fact that they consider revision unnecessary.

This already complex situation is made the more complicated, for the time being at least, by the fact that a Presidential commission is about to report on the operation of the British labor laws, which numerous industrialists have held up as a model for American legislation. The A. F. of L. was represented on the commission. The C. I. O. refused to have anything to do with it, frankly suspicious that the study was ordered with amendments to the Wagner act in mind.

Apparently the fight over amending the act is to be preceded by a preliminary skirmish, which may produce an important test of strength. A few days after Mr. Roosevelt gave William Green, president of the federation, the word that revision would be undertaken, the President reappointed Donald Wakefield Smith to the Labor Board. Green's criticism of the board had been matched for its vigor and emphasis by his criticism of Smith individually. The A. F. of L. may be expected to oppose Senate confirmation of the nomination, along with numerous business interests ready to take the Federation's side of that issue.

THE LAW ITSELF was enacted to prevent employers from discouraging membership in unions. It says that the workers have a right to self organization and collective bargaining. Any employer who abridges that right by interference, restraint or coercion is guilty, under the act, of an "unfair labor practice."

The law authorized creation of the National Labor Relations Board as its administrative agent, gave it broad investigatory powers, and the duty to determine by a secret election or otherwise whether, in case of dispute, the employes of a particular company wished a particular union to represent them in collective bargaining.

Further—and this provision has been the origin of many protests from the A. F. of L.—the act says the board shall decide what the "election district" shall be, whether the employes to be polled shall be all the workers in a given plant, whether the election shall be by a particular trade or trades within the plant, or any other subdivision.

Once the choice of the employes as to their union is established, by a majority vote, the law compels the employer to bargain with that union and to bargain "in good faith."

From this provision has grown a much disputed ruling by the board that if in the course of collective bargaining an agreement is reached between the employer and the union, the employer must embody that agreement in a written and signed contract. The board regards refusal to do this as evidence of bad faith.

In a dozen or so cases the board has ordered the cancellation of contracts between the employer and the A. F. of L. on the basis of its power to determine the bargaining or election unit.

Other provisions of the Wagner act set forth the procedure by which any employer or union, which considers that it is the victim of an injustice due to a decision of the board, has the right of appeal to the Federal courts. The law says that findings of the board as to facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

The merit system for personnel, revived to white heat with the President's sweeping orders of June 24, has captured the imagination of Duval Talmadge McCutchen, a student of George Washington law school and an employe of the Federal Government, who makes the suggestion in a doctoral dissertation that the merit system be applied to industry.

He would establish in place of the NLRB a system of courts of economic equity to adjudicate labor complaints individually instead of in groups, holding that this is in accord with the best American tradition and at the same time an aggressive solution toward industrial democracy.

His book, "Technique for Democracy," is descriptive of a system which Dr. McCutchen contends is practical and capable of supervising the great body of industrial workers in the United States, without employing more than 25,000 persons, and this should be "self-sustaining through court fees," says the advance announcement of the work.

"Henry Ford," it was held, "can run a plant if he only has to raise the wages of those who are distinctly productive in his factory. He cannot run a factory if everyone gets the same raise regardless of efficiency. The efficient worker should share in the profits and be treated with respect," it was contended.

It is distressing to note here that the merit system has not been entirely accepted in the Federal service. There first must be a universal will for the merit system before it will operate anywhere. Without a universal determination to make it operative, the very ideal is hopeless. It boils down to every individual making up his mind to get ahead in his own job through his own merit, and without the aid and pull of outside influences. And right there any idea of a merit system runs against human nature. But the ideal is not far-fetched, and some day it may be working to perfection in the Federal Government and Henry Ford's factory, alike.

Incidentally, Dr. McCutchen's book will be available September 15. His dissertation was presented to the University of Pennsylvania.

The Agriculture Graduate School heads want it known that the courses offered by the school are not designed to prepare for civil service examinations of any type. "They are only general training courses designed to increase the efficiency of Government workers," it was explained.

Among more than 100 courses to be offered in the semester beginning on September 19, there are courses in high-sped stenography. Those who pass these will be given a special noncompetitive examination by the Civil Service Commission for the purpose of establishing a list of the most efficient workers in this field. This list, however, is not an official register and no certifications are made from it. It is simply available for inspection by Federal officials.

You have watched the decentralization movement of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is sending local workers to the most scattered point in the country; and now it becomes interesting to note that the bureau has established 13 regional offices for the handling of unjust enrichment tax cases and processing tax refund cases.

The bureau points out that the object is two-fold; to expedite the determination of unjust enrichment tax liabilities, and to secure the earlier settlement under Title 7 of the 1936 revenue act, of taxpayers' claims for refund of processing and floor stock taxes paid. The field investigations will be under the supervision of revenue agents in charge in the varous regional areas, working under the Income Tax Unit in Washington.

"This arrangement is also intended to provide the taxpayers of the country with an opportunity, not only for an earlier settlement of their claims for refund and for an earlier determination of their tax liabilities; but also for more direct contact, during the procedure, with examining officers and their supervisors of the Bureau of Internal Revenue," it was pointed out.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Woman Marry Younger Man of Another Race and Creed, When Family and Friends Object?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman of 34 and for the past two years have been in love with a man five years my junior who belongs to another race and religious faith. I have had many proposals of marriage, but due to responsibilities at home I have not considered them seriously. Those responsibilities have been removed recently and now I feel free to do some of the things which I have wanted to do. The man is very well educated, refined and the type of man I admire and respect. The difference in age bothers me, but not him. The difference in race and religion also bothers me, but not him.

• • • •

My relatives tell me it will hurt them very much if I marry this man, even though they admit that he is one of the best, and respect him as much as I do. This situation has made me very nervous and as we both work in the same office I do not think I can endure it much longer. I have been criticized by my "friends" for keeping company with this man because of his race. Can you tell me if I should transfer to a position in another city and try to forget? Or do you think it better to marry this man and try to overcome these doubts and fears about age and religion? I feel quite certain we could make each other happy in spite of these differences. Very truly yours,

V. R.

DEAR V. R.: Not long ago I was talking with a woman who, at the age of 32, married a man six years younger than herself, who likewise belonged to a different religious faith, although not to a different race. (Her religious belief, by the way, is the same as yours). They have been married now for three years and it is plain to behold that theirs is a flawless companionship, embracing complete mutual understanding and quiet mutual interdependence. Like you, this woman was distressed by fears and doubts concerning the advisability of the union, up to the very hour the marriage ceremony was performed. But today she looks back on that period of wretched indecision with genuine amusement and, like all happy wives, is a stanch advocate of marriage as the finest of all careers for a woman.

• • • •

In discussing marriage in general, and her marriage in particular, she remarked that, in her opinion, sound character and good disposition on the part of both husband and wife are the best materials with which to build an enduring and harmonious union. She went on to explain that such persons, having committed themselves to a partnership, find it possible to work out, on a co-operative basis, personally satisfactory solutions of supposed handicaps. She maintains that fair play is rooted in honorable character, as of course it is, and that no amount of sacrificial effort on one person's part can compensate for lack of suc hcharacter in the other person. "If both husband and wife have the staying power that is inherent in real character, together they may surmount any obstacle, and a marriage's chances of surviving are no stronger than the weakest lack of such character in the other she said.

• • • •

In discussing the saving aspects of a good disposition with its concomitant sense of humor, she touched on her own and her husband's differing devotional practices. He sings in a Protestant choir. She is a member of the Catholic Church. Yet each respects and supports the other's interest in his traditional form of worship. She recalled (while her husband listened and chuckled) the time, early in their marriage, when he came upon her carefully pressing the surplice which he wears while singing in the choir. "My forefathers would turn in their graves if they could see me doing laundry for the such-and-such church," she rallie dhim then. "And so would mine," quoth he, "if they knew I was buying coal for the Catholics!"

• • • •

The point, easy to deduce, was this: sympathetic understanding, wholehearted mutual respect, 100 per cent co-operation and a ready fund of humor in the spirits of both had carried them effortlessly across the supposed barrier of so-called religious difference; while their co-equal mental maturity rendered the difference in their ages utterly negligible. You and the man you love can bridge similar differences with equal success if your respective characters are equally mature and your dispositions equally sweet, and if you possess fundamental kinship of mind and spirit.

• • • •

Since you are "quite certain (you) could make each other happy in spite of (racial and religious) differences," and since your family, while opposing the marriage on grounds which, in my opinion, amount to sheer snobbery, nevertheless "admits that (the man) is one of the best, and respects him as much as (you) do," I believe you would be more than justified in embracing this long-deferred chance at personal fulfillment. If your friends' criticisms of this man are based solely on his particular race and creed, and not on his individual qualities, I think they should be dismissed as provincially prejudiced opinions of no importance. As between the companionship of a worthwhile and well loved man and the aproval of a horde of fair-weather friends, there can be no comparison. The latter is poor consolation for the loss or denial of the former, and affords no platform on which to build a rich and satisfactory personal life. Marry according to the dictates of your own head, heart and conscience and never to please a hide-bound clique.

M. H.

Pastel Moire Returns To Fashion Importance

Paris (U.P.).—Never has a season stressed so much the importance of rich new materials or the revival of old-fashioned fabrics. Chief among the latter is moire, that delightful medium between grosgrain and watered taffeta.

Yards and yards of it are used in pastel colors to form romantic evening dresses or floor-length evening coats. But at the same time a narrow moire ribbon may play perhaps just as important a part in a dress' perfection of detail.

Friend of Earhart Is Speaker, but Also Good Doer.

By Christine Sadler.

AS THE Civil Aeronautics Authority assumes command of the Nation's aviation progress it comes into possession of the flying service of but one woman—pretty and capable Blanche Noyes, beginning her third term as air marking supervisor and pilot for the Government.

Flying a four-place cabin ship painted black with yellow stripes, Uncle Sam's only official woman flyer has criss-crossed the continent many times in the interest of air safety. Speaking before town and State government groups and civic clubs, she explains the need for air marking and works to get the program sponsored. When the questions come, she is ready with facts about the chemistry of paint, lettering and airport rating symbols. If need be, she could visit a roof and mark out the letter squares.

But that would be a stunt, and she is both thumbs down on sensational stuff for women. She flies with luggage packed around her, carrying enough clothes for all types of weather. With the exception of a hat, which she keeps hanging nearby, she is dressed for office visits, banquets —or anything on the schedule.

Rivaled Earhart.

She has been flying solo since 1929, when her husband—the late Dewey Noyes, who was killed in an air crash in 1935—bought her a plane, painted it a "bilious green," and proceeded to get her ready for the first woman's air derby. After a fire and forced landing in a mesquite patch, she came in fourth—finishing neck and neck with Amelia Earhart, who rated third.

That was the beginning of a friendship with Amelia Earhart that ended only with the latter's last flight and resulted in Mrs. Noyes' becoming connected with the Bureau of Air Commerce, for which Miss Earhart and Phoebe Omlie had worked out the air marking program later adopted, and where the two led the fight to pry the Government's aviation doors open for women.

Mrs. Noyes started with the bureau in 1936, taking the place of Miss Omlie, who had worked with three other women flyers to initiate the big program so vital to safe flying.

Has Traveled Fast.

Between her first derby and the Government job, however, she had not been idle. She has been in all the national air races for women, except one, set the women's East to West speed record of 14 hours, 54 minutes, and 49 seconds, and year before last—when on leave from the bureau—was co-winner of the Bendix speed dash.

In 1930, between the time she was demonstration pilot for a commercial company and flying an autogiro for another company, she found time to take John D. Rockefeller for his first and only air ride. While they were up, so it was declared at the time, the stock market wobbled.

Before she was married—and this is a part of her career not generally known—she was on the stage as Blanche Wilcox, playing feminine leads with no less than George Brent as a leading man. She and Roger Pryor, another movie favorite, played their first leads together, and Harriet Hilliard was a bit girl with her.

Women Won't Work.

Her stage training is, of course, a help in her present job. As she expresses it, she has two majors to draw from—the stage and aviation. She doesn't believe in building a job around anything less than a major interest thoroughly mastered. Too many women, she feels, are unwilling to pay the price for mastery and consequently have but brief careers. This has obviously been true in aviation, where the "emancipated woman" had an almost even start with the men, but where many of the feminine aspirants thought that the desire to fly qualified them as pilots.

"Jobs don't come that easily," declares Mrs. Noyes, who has approximately 600 flying hours to her credit, is now operating her fifth ship, and who has made her flying knowledge keep pace with a profession that advances so rapidly last month's technique is rarely good enough for this.

Until all 48 States have their air routes completely marked and flying is considered as safe as motoring, Uncle Sam's woman flyer will not be satisfied in her present job. "We have approximately 12,000 towns completely marked, out of a possible 22,000. New York has just taken up the program, making the circle of states complete. Florida, the home State of my boss, Maj. A. B. McMullen, is the best marked State of all," she says.

Flying is not a stunt but a business for Mrs. Blanche Noyes, air-marking supervisor and pilot for the Government who is shown above with her four-place cabin ship in which she has criss-crossed the continent many times in the interest of her program for air safety.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU ARE just as interested, I find, in how Mrs. Jones takes her weight down as you are in the way the movie stars keep streamlined. Maybe Dolores Del Rio does have a 24-inch waistline and maybe Janet Gaynor is as cute as a bug's ear . . . You're not a movie star and what they do doesn't help you to lose weight!

But when you hear that Mrs. Jones down the street or over in the next towa has taken off a lot of weight, nothing can stop you! If she can reduce, so can you! And for the sake of incentive, let me tell you about a Mrs. Jones in San Francisco who took off 47 pounds in just five months. Perhaps the most remarkable thing about this story is that all this weight was lost after a very bad start, due to the replacement of lost fat by water.

Weighed 278 Pounds.

She started her reducing program early in March and at that time weighed 278 pounds. On the first week of a strict diet no weight was lost, and at the end of the first two weeks only 2 pounds had come off, but she kept right on with her diet and exercise and at the end of the five months she had averaged a loss of 2 1-3 pounds per week and had taken many inches off her measurements.

This reducer wisely limited herself to mild exercises, but she took them daily with the result that the musculature was toned and the measurements improved markedly along with the weight loss. To be specific, she took 4 inches off the hipline, 6 inches off the bust, 2 inches off the calf and 1 off the ankle.

One of her favorite exercises was for the hips, thighs, tummy and waistline:

Position: Lying on side on mat, legs extended straight down.

Movement: Raise the top leg upward as high as possible. Lower and repeat the exercise 10 times before changing sides. Gradually work up to 50 times with each leg.

With excessive overweight it is of paramount importance to strengthen the abdominal muscles. Otherwise the vital organs which have been held in place by the fat have a tendency to sag as this fat is removed. Here is an easy abdominal exercise:

Position: Lying on back on floor, knees flexed, feet on floor, hands clasped back of head.

Takes Off Much Weight.

Movement: Pulling up and in with the lower abdominal wall, press the small of the back against the floor. Then, holding the abdominal muscles taut, bend alternate knees back against the chest, lifting hips slightly off the floor with each bend of the knees.

If Mrs. Jones had stopped her exercise and diet at the end of the first two disappointing weeks, she would be in the same boat with some of the rest of you who think you can't reduce. She went right along and now, having lost nearly 50 pounds, she knows she can get down to normal weight.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 29.

LAST JUNE the most interesting school in New York—which has nearly as many as Boston—graduated its first class. Seventy-one young ladies, all smart and mostly pretty, were sent into the world after a year's intensive study of fashion in all its branches, from retail merchandizing to deep-dish style design. Of this class, two-thirds were already employed by stores, magazines, reporting services and manufacturers. This fascinating school is the Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers, and operates at 9 Rockefeller Plaza.

ALICE HUGHES.

I have been deeply interested in it, because I see youngsters taught quickly and efficiently what most of us learn the hard way—by long apprenticeship, by heart-breaking changes of jobs, and at salaries which do no one credit, and us very little good.

Now it faces its second year with every prospect of a large enrollment. It is not an easy spot to crash. Girls must be between 20 and 30—they must have had either two years of college or some practical experience, and she must answer a stiff questionnaire and a searching personal interview. Already two scholarships have been awarded, one by the ace decorator, Eleanor LeMaire, and the other by a group of local women of which I have the honor to be one. They went to Miss Nelle Bone, of Fort Worth, Tex., a graduate of Texas State College for Women, and to Miss Mary Lue Hays, of Toledo, Ohio, who majored in the fine arts of Toledo University. Both were active in student affairs at their schools.

So come September another group of vivid, ambitious girls will start preparation for work in the world at the Tobe-Coburn School. There is no pleasanter spot in my arduous winter than the day I speak to these girls, for there is boundless inspiration in their bright and eager faces. I can think of no finer start in a career life for a girl than a year or two at 9 Rockefeller plaza.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sally Rand, whom this town has only seen practicing the art of la danse warmly dressed in a few ostrich feathers, has just come as close to us as suburban Mount Kico with the drama, playing Sadie Thompson in "Rain," which was immortalized by the late Jeanne Eagels. In this grand old show Aunt Sal wears enough clothes for an Arctic winter, and about 350 people gathered in the local op'ry house to behold her performance. Of course, if she had peeled a few tons of raiment, at least double that number of sinners would have showed up. But Sal is really devoted to Art—in clothes.

A tragic coincidence happened here recently. The very night 19,000 people heard the final concert of our Philharmonic in the beautiful stadium that bears his name, the jolly 89-year-old philanthropist, Adolph Lewisohn, went to sleep for the last time. And Conductor van Hoogstraten, unaware of his passing, asked the enormous audience "to be grateful to the charming old gentleman who built this place." But old Adolph, who loved his nightly bridge, and even a spot of dancing, was then beyond human gratitude . . .

• • • •

Daughters of rich and prominent men often want to "do things"—and very laudable, too. Take Dorothy Young, daughter of Owen D. She devoted herself to the dance for a while, but now it is literature, and her first book, "Diary Without Dates," has just been accepted. Attagirl, Dotty.

• • • •

A headline over a local agony column pleases me quite a lot. It reads: "Some Husbands Are Emotional Luxury." But why the "Some," kid?

I just hear that four New England States—New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut—are ganging up for the World's Fair here and will run a joint exhibit. Yes, and I suppose that dear old lady in black passing out the New Hampshire booklets will be Aunt Alice Hughes. Perhaps she will even render the "Wedding of the Winds" on the pianoforte, unless forcibly restrained by the beautiful fair cops!

Closely inspecting the schhoolgirl duds for fall—those 12 to 16 little numbers—I find they have exceptional distinction. Some folks blame the new trends of Queen Elizabeth, who has to rig out her elder daughter this fall. Whatever the case, Scotch plaid skirts abound, to be worn with flannel jackets and pullovers. And the dirndl will be everywhere, of course. Yep, the kids do well!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Her Dream of Luxury.

To go downtown to the late summer bargain sales and buy a lot of "marvelously reduced" little dresses, gloves, slips, shoes, etc., that will enable her to boast virtuously to her friends next spring that she got them for "simply nothing" last August.

• • • •

To look over the new fall dresses in a shop without surreptitiously examining the price tags when the salewoman hangs them on the display rack.

• • • •

To give to the janitor's wife with an easy conscience the hideous hat she was talked into buying and to sally forth to buy another that is really becoming.

• • • •

To keep up with all the changes in costume jewelry and sport the latest cute little gold bugs on her lapel and the newest dried peppers around her neck.

• • • •

To throw away with a grand gesture a stocking when it gets a little run in a place that won't show.

• • • •

To walk into a bookstore and buy the latest book everyone is reading instead of putting herself on the waiting list at the public library.

• • • •

To study a luncheon menu in a tearoom wholly on the basis of whether she prefers creamed chicken or stuffed peppers and not with any regard as to whether it is in the 45 or 85 cent classification.

• • • •

To be able to say, "Oh, well, it really would cost so much to repair my old fur coat that I might just as well put that money into a new one."

• • • •

To hail a taxi with the comforting assurance, "It's only a little more than the bus and when you think of the time saved——"

Fight Diphtheria Is First Health Duty of Parents

Children Should Be Immunized Early, Says Doctor.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Today the one fundamentally necessary preparation for the child who enters school for the first time is to be immunized against diphtheria.

By carrying out this procedure on a widespread scale, it has been possible almost to wipe this ancient scourge off the face of the earth. It is one of the most astonishing accomplishments of the modern age. It takes a moment of thought to realize how great and important the change has been. There are, indeed, today, few young parents who realize the cold grip of fear that clutched the hearts of their predecessors—the young parents of 50 years ago—when the thought of diphtheria came to them.

Now all this is changed. The horror is gone. In the first place, if diphtheria does strike, there is antitoxin as a form of treatment, which, if given early, will save 99 cases out of 100.

But far more important than that is that the spread of the disease can be entirely controlled by giving active immunization. This is done by the hypodermic injection of diphtheria toxoid. Toxoid is the toxin of diphtheria which has been incubated at 38 degrees to 40 degrees centigrade for four to six weeks. This causes it to lose its toxicity, but it retains its antigenic properties—that is, it retains the property to cause the body to produce its own antitoxin and immune substances against diphtheria.

It is recommended that this immunization be given to the infant on reaching the age of 1 year. It is imperative that it be given to children before they enter school for the first time.

What this has done to the incidence of the terrific old plague, when carried out on a large scale, is, as I have said at the beginning, simply astonishing. In well-immunized communities the disease has been reduced to the vanishing point.

Undaunted by Sino-Japan War, Wife Will Join Capt. McHugh

Navy Officer's Spouse Will Leave in Autumn to Be Near Husband Who Is Assigned to 'Cover' Important Doings of Gen. Chiang.

By Dudley Harmon.

Undaunted by a mere war—even if it's an "unofficial" undeclared one—Mrs. James McHugh, wife of Capt. McHugh, U. S. N., expects to pack her trunks sometime this fall, place her children in school in this country, and sail for China to be near her husband.

Capt. McHugh is having all kinds of interesting adventures there, according to letters received from him by Washington friends. Shortly after the outbreak of the conflict with Japan, he was assigned by the Navy to accompany Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese leader, and his courageous wife wherever they went, and to write detailed reports to this government on what was going on.

Since the captain speaks Chinese—he served for a time at our embassy in Peiping—he is able to converse with the General, who, unlike his Wellesley-educated wife, speaks little English.

Mrs. McHugh is the daughter of Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former United States Ambassador to Germany, who now is traveling in central Europe. She is a sister of Mrs. Magruder, whose husband, Col. Magruder, recently returned to Washington for duty, and has taken a house on Thirty-sixth place. Mrs. McHugh, who spent last winter in Washington, is now in New England.

James Graham Parsons and Evan Wilson both drew exotic assignments when State Department orders were passed around recently to the men who have been attending the Foreign Service Training School, here. Mr. Parsons got Manchuria and Mr. Wilson is to be sent to Cairo. Both have infant children—the Wilson baby is less than two months old—but neither they nor their wives are the least bit daunted by the problem of coping with feeding formulas, etc., in countries where most mothers would just as soon have their children eat raw beefsteak.

Mrs. Parsons is still in Stockbridge, Mass., where she spent most of the summer. She and her husband have given up the house they occupied in Georgetown and Mr. Parsons is sharing bachelor quarters with Ellis Briggs. Mrs. Wilson will rejoin her husband after Labor Day from her parents' country home in New York, and they have a tentative sailing date of October 25.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, our Minister to Norway, writes friends that she is having a busy, if very rainy, summer. She and an American friend motored to the very northernmost part of Norway recently and she also has been on a yachting trip. Norwegians look forward to the time of year when the daylight lasts almost 24 hours, but the Minister says that they were disappointed this year, as the deluge hardly ever let up.

Odds and ends: Kathleen and Rosemary Kennedy, daughters of our Ambassador to London and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, are listed among the 350 young ladies who will be presented to New York society this winter. They already have been presented at court, a distinction which is becoming increasing rare, thanks to their father, the Ambassador . . . The counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben will entertain at a small dinner tomorrow evening.

Red Cross Fills Committee Post

With the announcement by Edgar Morris, general chairman, of the approaching Red Cross roll call for 1938, comes the news that Mrs. James Roosevelt, wife of the President's son, has been appointed chairman of the residential committee for the District of Columbia.

Mrs. James K. McClintock, wife of the vice chairman of the National Red Cross, and Mrs. E. G. Montgomery will serve as vice chairman of Mrs. Roosevelt's committee.

Many women prominent in the social life of Washington will take an active part in the coming roll call. Under Mrs. Roosevelt's direction residents of more than 200 Washington apartment houses will be invited to join the Red Cross by "captains" now being selected. Mrs. Roosevelt's committee is one of the important divisions of the annual roll call and has shown a steady growth since its organization three years ago. Under the leadership of Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, 60 apartments were included in the first year's campaign, and again last year, under Mrs. Grayson's direction, the number of apartment houses canvassed was increased to more than 160.

Mrs. Montgomery, who acted as vice chairman of the residential group with Mrs. Grayson, is president of the Twentieth Century Club and a former chairman of the District of Columbia Red Cross Motor Corps. She has worked as a volunteer in the chapter in various capacities for more than 12 years and is a member of the executive board of the chapter at this time.

Mrs. McClintock, who also acted as vice chairman under Mrs. Grayson, is comptroller of the University Women's Club and has served as vice chairman of the residential committee for the past two years in the roll call.

French Gunboat To Arrive Here September 14

Newport, a favorite port of call for Navy men from other lands, will be the scene, on September 7, of the arrival of the D'Entre Casteaux, French gunboat stationed in West Indian waters. Commander Serpette and his nine officers, plus a whole crew of sailors, will remain at Newport until September 12 before coming to Washington. At present the ship is at Halifax.

In the Capital, where they will stay from September 14 to 23, it's a foregone conclusion that they will be feted extensively, although as yet a program has not been worked out. They will be partied, of course, by the Commandant of the Navy Yard Admiral George Pettengill and Mrs. Pettengill, who have been hosts to the men of the British cruiser Yorke and more recently to the Brazilian training ship, the Almirante Saldanha, and to Argentine officers, who arrived shortly after that on the Presidente Sarmiento.

As in the past, high commands of the Navy Department will probably entertain for them. There may be a party aboard the gunboat itself, and the French Embassy is apt to be the scene of still another event, despite the absence of the Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin.

Committee Already Working on Program; Belgian Team Drops Out.

Members of the committee of this year's Inter-American Horse Show, who believe in being prepared, have already erected a large sign advertising the event at the entrance to Meadowbrook on the East-West highway, where the show will be held October 20 through October 22. The show is the largest outdoor exhibition of its kind in the country, and each year attracts shoals of social notables.

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean will again be chairman of the entertainment committee, and will have as her vice chairman, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. Besides being a famous horsewoman, Mrs. Robert is a capable organizer, and expects to plunge into work for the event on her return from Saratoga and Battle Creek, where she will visit her mother, Mrs. Harold Walker, who is taking a rest cure.

The Belgians, who won the show last year, are not returning this season, leaving the field to the United States, Chile and Mexico. The Chileans are sending, in addition to the four officers of the official army team, four members of the Carabeneers, which is likened to the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, although the Carabeneers are not police officers.

On their arrival in this country in the near future, the Chileans will go to Governors Island, where they will remain to train their mounts until just before the inter-American opens. The army team is headed by Capt. Edwardo Yanyez, who, with his pretty wife, has come here before in the same capacity.

A round of entertainment will mark the days of the show. The president of the show, District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, will entertain the officers at a luncheon, and there is a possibility that the affair may open with a hunt ball.

The Mexican team will compete in the International Horse Show at Havana, Cuba, on September 6 and 9, before sailing for New York. The team, headed by Capt. Armando Villareal, who is known to Washingtonians for his previous visits here, has five members. They will probably arrive in this Country September 20.

Army Clubs First to Open Fall Work

Daughters Plan to Hold Initial Luncheon After Labor Day.

With Labor Day looming just over the horizon and the rush back to Washington beginning, organizations are shaping their season's programs and getting ready for a heavy winter.

Several of the service organizations have already completed their plans for the coming winter. The first to get under way will be the Army daughters, who will have their first meeting on the Monday after Labor Day at the Army-Navy Club. The 1 o'clock luncheon will be preceded by a business meeting at noon.

Mrs. Paul Stanley Bond, who lives in Washington, is national president of the Army Daughters, and Mrs. Claude Dudley is president of the Washington Chapter. Mrs. Seth W. Cook is in charge of the reservations for the luncheon.

The Army Relief Society, which was organized to "provide relief in case of emergency for the dependent widows and orphans of officers and enlisted men of the regular Army of the United States has chapters all over the country, each of whom have a yearly quota to fill in order to carry on the work the organization has undertaken.

Under Mrs. Joyes' leadership her section has already completed plans for the winter. Last year this section held a series of ten card parties with a tea following and wound up with a food and gift sale. As a result they went "over the top" on their quota and turned in several hundred dollars extra, so they have adopted the same system this year.

On the 21st of October the first of the card parties will be held at the home of Gen. and Mrs. Smedberg, 1810 Wyoming avenue. Tables are already reserved for the first event.

For each of the card parties and the tea a member of the branch will act as hostess. They will be Mrs. John Miley, Miss Frances Webster, Mrs. Frank Coe, wife of Gen. Coe; Mrs. William Cruikshank, wife of Gen. Cruikshank; Mrs. George Newgarden, wife of Col. Newgarden; Mrs. Joseph Gaston, widow of Gen. Gaston; Mrs. William Smedberg, Mrs. Maury Cralle, Mrs. Edwin St. Johns Grebble, widow of Gen. Grebble, and Mrs. Melville Jarvis, wife of Gen. Jarvis.

The gift and food sale is eagerly looked forward to each year, partly because of the famous "white elephant table" and partly because of "The Doll."

The White Elephant table is composed of donations from people who have at some time or another received as a gift from "Aunt Lulu" or someone, an object which has proved as useful to them as a white elephant would be . . .

The Doll, is an enormous French doll, dressed in the latest fashion by Mrs. Archie Willis (wife of Col. Willis) who also makes a trunkfull of clothes to go with the doll.

Last year the doll was named by Mrs. Malin Craig (wife of Gen. Craig, chief of staff of the Army.) The name was placed in a sealed envelope to be guessed by all comers. It was won by Mrs. Ernest Graves, who guessed the name "Elizabeth" correctly. She presented it to the Army-Relief to be sold for their benefit.

Mme. Cantecuzene was so charmed with "Elizabeth" that she bought the doll and presented it to the Republican Club, where it now makes its home.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Invited for Affair October 18.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who for the last two years has headed the list of patronesses for this event, has been invited to head them again this year.

Among those who have indicated they will take tables are Mrs. George Harrison, regent of the chapter; Mrs. W. F. Pearson, former regent of the chapter; Mrs. John Homer, vice regent of the chapter, and Mrs. George Grimes.

A feature of the afternoon will be a white elephant table which will be presided over by Mrs. H E. Paddock, wife of Commander Paddock, of the Navy, who makes her home at the Westchester.

Miss Frances Webster is in charge of the arrangements.

Children's Bureau Lists Rules For Proper Care of Infants

THREE general rules for keeping the baby in sound health are given by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor in a revised edition of the folder, "Keeping the Well Baby Well."

These rules are to feed him according to the doctor's advice; teach him good health habits and get the doctor's help in guarding against disease.

A doctor should supervise the baby's care from birth, and his advice should be carefully followed in regard to feeding. Most mothers can nurse their babies the first six or seven months and this gives the baby a better chance for steady, normal growth during the first weeks and months of life than does artificial feeding. If the baby must be artificially fed the doctor will recommend a formula for bottle feedings.

Habit training should be begun early. A regular routine of bathing, dressing, feeding, sleeping, sun baths, play and exercise should be planned, but the program need not be so rigid that it can never be altered. The folder contains a suggested daily program for a normal baby under five months of age.

Four rules suggested for avoiding disease are:

1. Have the baby immunized against diphtheria when he is nine months old and vaccinated against smallpox before he is 1 year old.

2. Keep him away from anyone who is ill. A person who has "only a cold" or "just a cough" may infect a baby and make him seriously ill. Never take the baby into crowded places, such as stores or theaters.

3. Keep flies and other insects away from him and from his food.

4. Boil his milk and drinking water and, unless the doctor orders otherwise, cook all his other food except fruit juices and cod-liver oil.

BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess

Teeny Weeny and the Whale.

Time only can supply the test
That proves what is for each the best. —Old Mother Nature.

"I've got the answer!" cried Sue. "If Teeny Weeny the Common Shrew weighs only 40 grains, and a Whale of the biggest kind weighs 150 tons, it would take 52,500,000 Shrews the size of Teeny Weeny to equal the Whale. Oh, my goodness, that can't be right!"

"It is though," said Sammy, looking at his own figures.

The Old Naturalist nodded. "That is the correct answer," said he, "and don't forget that tiny as he is Teeny Weeny is just as perfect a mammal as the other."

"He's more perfect, if you ask me," said Sammy.

"How so?" asked Tommy.

"He has four legs," replied Sammy promptly.

"True, but it isn't necessary to have four legs in order to be a perfect mammal," said the Old Naturalist. "Man is a perfect mammal, but he has only two legs and two feet. You can't call his arms and hands, legs and feet. Because he walks upright, he has need of only two legs and feet, so Mother Nature gave him arms and hands for other purposes. A whale has no possible use for legs or arms, so in place of the latter it has a pair of paddles or flippers, and in place of legs has been given a powerful tail ending in a pair of flukes, a sort of propeller to drive its owner through the water. Mammals on land must get about to get food, so they have been given legs and feet. Mammals living in the ocean, never leaving the water, must be able to swim to get about and find their food, so Mother Nature has provided them with swimming apparatus. So they are just as perfect as other mammals, only different."

"Didn't you tell us that Teeny Weeny's eyes are no good? That about all he can do with them is to tell light from darkness?" Sue asked.

The Old Naturalist admitted that this was so, and Sue promptly said that in that case she didn't think Shrew was a perfect animal, Sammy and Tommy agreed with her.

The fine lines around the eyes of the Old Naturalist puckered into what Sue called laugh wrinkles. "It all depends on what you call perfect," he explained. "If you had a third hand for which you had no use would you consider that you were any more perfect than you are with only two?"

Sue promptly admitted that she would not. In fact, she was inclined to think that a useless third hand would be imperfection.

"Just so," agreed the Old Naturalist. "Shrews live where there is so little light that they practically have no use for eyes insofar as seeing things is concerned. So Mother Nature has provided them with tiny eyes of no use excepting to tell light from darkness, and that is all a Shrew wants of eyes. Teeny Weeny has all he needs to live the sort of life he is intended to live. In other words, he is perfectly equipped to live his kind of life. What more can any one ask? So don't waste your pity on Teeny Weeny because he can see no better. Now I think we'll take him outside and let him go. With that tremendous appetite of his he must be starving by now even if he did eat a companion his own size during the night."

"Well," replied the Old Naturalist, "the kind we've been talking about, the biggest one, lives chiefly on some of the tiniest creatures in the sea, so tiny that they have to be strained from water. So these Whales have no teeth, but growing down from the roof of the mouth are plates of what is called whalebone, although it isn't true bone, and these plates end in long hairlike fringes. The Whale, with mouth open, swims into a mess of the tiny creatures he feeds on, and closes his mouth, forcing the water out. The hairlike fringes strain the food out and it is swallowed. So the smallest mammal sometimes kills others his own size for food, and the largest mammal lives on little creatures almost too small to be seen."

Loyalist Army Surrounding 3 Rebel Divisions

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 29.—The Spanish loyalists announced tonight three divisions of insurgents have been cut off from their comrades in the rocky valley of the Zujar, 140 miles southwest of Madrid on the Estremadura front.

Reinforced government columns, striking westwerd toward the Portuguese frontier after reportedly turning Gen. Franco' s drive on the Almaden mercury mines into a rout, were said to have reached the gates of the insurgent base of Castuera.

At Castuera the loyalists, hammering at the insurgent flanks along the winding Rio Zujar, were 22 miles behind the spearhead of Franco's suddenly halted offensive at Cabeza del Buey.

Rebels Reorganizing.

The insurgent commander in the south, Gen. Queipo de Llano, reorganized his lines in defense of Castuera west of the Zujar River and 45 miles from the Almaden mining basin.

The three insurgent divisions, according to dispatches from the loyalist base at Andujar, near the southern end of the Estremadura front, were trapped northeast of Castuera within a bend of the Zujar when the loyalists cut the Badajoz-Madrid railroad and main highway.

Insurgent dispatches, although admitting heavy loyalist attacks, said that all of them had been repulsed with heavy losses.

McAfee Execution Delayed by Court

William (Major) McAfee, convicted of slaying Henrietta B. Anderson, 36-year-old Government clerk, in her small apartment at 1633 L street northwest a year ago, received a postponement of his death sentence from September 9 to November 4 in District Court yesterday when Justice F. Dickinson Letts agreed the defense attorneys should have more time within which to await the outcome of a Court of Appeals decision.

The woman was beaten to death with a furnace shaker. McAfee, who is colored, appealed on the grounds the trial judge did not instruct the jury it could find him not guilty.

It's Upward-Swing Music, Sellers Say

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Is "swing" music heralding a business upturn?

Trade sources pondered today when they read in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's monthly review of credit and business conditions that the only classification of merchandise which department stores of this general area reported selling better now than a year ago was "musical instruments and radio."

A bank spokesman said their statistics were not broken down sufficiently to indicate definitely, but they had heard of a big increase in sale of phonograph records due to "swing."

Suspect Cleared In Geary Killing

A coroner's jury last night decided following an inquest that Eugene Geary, 40, World War veteran found shot dead in his Hillside, (Md.) home last week, had succumbed to shotgun wounds at the hands of unknown persons.

Verdict of the jury automatically cleared Charles F. Joy, 65, Geary's neighbor, who had been charged in the death.

Although not called to testify at the Capitol Heights hearing, Joy volunteered the information that at 2 a. m. Saturday, August 20, the day Geary was found slain, he had heard a scream, followed by Geary's shout for help.

On rushing over to Geary's home, Joy said, he discovered that the veteran had been shot in the elbow and side. After placing Geary on the bed, the witness added, he returned home.

Md. Farmer Held Slain in Accident By Neighbor's Gun

MILTON MILES.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation stated yesterday that the bullet that killed Milton Miles, 29, as he was working in a turnip patch on his farm near Fairland, Md., Sunday, was fired by a rifle belonging to Paul Stromberg, 30, a neighbor. Stromberg was released under $500 bond on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Earlier in the day, Stromberg had told Montgomery County police that he might have unwittingly been responsible for Miles' death. He said that on Sunday he had been trying to cure a hunting dog of gun-shyness by shooting over the animal's head with a .22 rifle.

When he heard yesterday that Miles was found dead on a hillside a few hundred yards from the spot where he had been firing his gun, Stromberg gave up to police.

ONLY ONE GASOLINE

From your own experience, we think you'll agree that motorists are most critical of engine performance, power and mileage when their cars are new.

Thousands of these critical new car owners, in 140 cities, were asked which gasoline they preferred on the basis of actual performance. Blue Sunoco came out 'way ahead of any other gasoline—including those selling at premium prices—and led its nearest competitor by 51.5% more votes.

Since its performance won first place among owners of new cars with high compression engines, obviously, in older cars Blue Sunoco will be equally efficient. Test it in your car and see if you don't agree.

This survey was conducted in 11 eastern states by an independent organization. The replies received were submitted to Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery, certified public accountants, who prepared the above tabulation therefrom.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

TEMPORARY WHITE HOUSE.
Hyde Park, Aug. 29.

There's a cardboard sign, "Temporary White House," tacked over the door of Room 227 at the comfortable old Nelson House in Poughkeepsie. That's exactly 4.9 miles from President Roosevelt's study at his house up the river, by the speedometer of the long, shiny White House limousine.

Robert Montgomery

* * * *

In this suite at a turn of the dark corridor on the second floor, 311 miles from the permanent White House, Secretary Marvin McIntyre and a staff of four from the executive offices pitch camp when the Squire of Hyde Park goes back to the old manse.

* * * *

Because Mr. Roosevelt plans to spend most of his time between now and November at Hyde Park, this will be to some extent the seat of the American Government for the next two months.

* * * *

Inside the cardboard-adorned portal is a three-room suite of average-size hotel bedrooms. All three are used as offices, and in each is a bed, a definitely democratic note which might cause Prime Minister Chamberlain to raise an eyebrow if he happened to saunter in.

"—beyond the bed, the telegraph"

This is headquarters when the seat of government moves from the Potomac to the Hudson. In the bedroom on the left is a telephone switchboard set up by the local telephone company, really an extension of the White House switchboard.

In the center room—that's where you're standing now, having a peek at the majesty of government—are four or five small tables and typewriters, over beyond the bed.

In the corner a telegraph instrument clicks away, with Doc Smithers of the secretariat listening intently, as if for the lost chord, and tapping at a diminutive typewriter.

* * * *

Against the wall is a huge wooden chest which travels with the President, a reddish-varnished chest big as a trunk, filled with folders of papers and big bulging envelopes of heavy manila and sheafs of documents, which is padlocked at night.

On a doorknob hangs a heavy dispatch bag of yellow leather, also fitted with a lock.

"—real thrill for the girls"

At two of the little tables over by the windows sit McIntyre and his secretary, earnest Henry Kannee, their heads together over some outgoing mail. The phone keeps ringing, and two others of the staff, the patrician and prematurely gray Grace Tully and the beauteous red-haired Roberta Barrows, are pounding typewriters.

Or maybe someone has started a bridge game over beyond the switchboard.

To the right is McIntyre's room, with two telephones beside the bed. In the corner stands his bag of golf clubs, poised as if for flight. Through the window flicker the lights of the movie theater across the street, where "Alexan 's Ragtime Band" is playing. A grand movie, and swell music; but its songs are too classical or too modern when the official McIntyre quartet tunes up at the end of a day at the "Temporary White House."

* * * *

It takes only a hundredth of a second longer to reach the President by phone at Krum Elbow II than at his study at the White House; and the pathetic shrieks of the half-purged impenitents, the Castor Oil Quartet, are as audible here as in Washington. (Around here the betting is that Senators George and Smith will win, while Tydings and O'Connor get bounced.)

* * * *

One day the girls of the Temporary White House, accustomed to the glamor of government, got a real thrill. They walked into the lobby and who should be sitting there but Robert Montgomery! He's from Poughkeepsie; his brother's a farmer nearby.

* * * *

That seems to cause as much excitement in this region as the fact that for two or three months this is the National Capital.

Gunman's Hand Shook, But He Gave Him $21

Two young men stepped into the filling station at First street and New York avenue northeast last night and asked for a package of cigarettes.

When Manager Joseph Carney, of 4914 Fourth street northwest, turned around with the package he found himself facing a pistol.

Carney observed the gunman's pistol hand was shaking, but he handed over $21 from the cash register anyway. The bandits fled on foot.

D. C. May Tie Sales Tax to Income Levy

Joint Committee Suggests Plan to Reach All Classes

By James D. Secrest.

A dual District tax that will be unique and at the same time evade knotty constitutional problems is being worked out by experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation under the direction of Colin F. Stam, committee counsel.

The levy, which will be urged before the next meeting of the District tax advisory committee early in September, will be aimed at the incomes of the well-to-do and the spendings of the salaried and wage earners. If enacted into law it would be the first combined income-sales tax in this country.

Plan a Compromise.

Suggested at a recent meeting of the advisory committee, the tax plan, as explained by Stan, was intended as a compromise between the income-tax proponents and the sales-tax advocates, who, up to now, have defeated their opponents without furthering their own respective causes.

Other ideas—still tenuous—that will be discussed by the Congressional investigators with the advisory committee are:

Repeal of the business privilege tax, the intangible personal property tax, and portions of the tangible personal property levy.

Retention of the "temporary" $1.75 realty tax wih provisions for adjustment if the new levies produce more revenue than needed for current operating expenses.

A "hands-off" policy on the fiscal relations squabble with the assumption that the $5,000,000 lump-sum payment will not be reduced.

Dr. Chester Pond, who was employed to do the research work for the committee, has gathered extensive data on the District tax system and taxes paid by other municipalities.

Cites Inequalities.

"It is obvious," commented Stam, "that District taxes are not now based on ability to pay."

The income-sales tax has the advantage, he said, of combining "ability to pay" with "making everyone tax conscious" regardless of the smallness of his income.

Under the plan evolved by Stam and the committee investigators the income tax would be restricted to business and professional profits and earnings from investments.

The sales tax, while touching all classes of buyers, would be aimed particularly at the salaried and wage-earning groups and the tourists and professional men who visit the National Capital for pleasure or business.

The committee experts will not recommend rates for the dual tax until after Auditor Daniel J. Donovan completes his estimates on District revenue needs for the next seven years. Stam expressed the opinion, however, that the sales tax would be low.

Illegality Averted.

Recalling that he had once in a written opinion stated that a District income tax would, raise "grave Constitutional questions," Stam pointed out that the restricted income tax would escape such a challenge by not applying to the incomes of non-residents and Federal employes.

Stam believes that the real estate tax should remain adjustable by the Commissioners, as at present, so that any revenue needs not met by other taxes could be met from realty property.

The fiscal relations problem, he pointed out, has evoked such controversies in the past that the committee investigators believe it wiser to treat it only superficially but to recognize it as a "fixed" source of District income.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, is expected back at the Capitol within a week or ten days and may be in Washington to confer with the joint committee investigators prior to their meeting with the District advisory group.

300 Uninsured Taxis May Lose License Plates

Police received orders late yesterday to impound the license plates of 300 taxicabs whose operators have failed to comply with the taxicab liability insurance act.

Records of the Public Utilities Commission disclosed that 3,280 taxicabs of the total of 3,580, have been certified as insured.

It looks as if Poor Lo, the Alaskan Indian, and his buddy, the Alaskan Eskimo, may soon have prohibition.

Reports on the drinking habits of the Indian and Eskimo have become so disturbing to the Office of Indian Affairs that Commissioner John Collier yesterday said some action is "obligatory."

He indicated that prohibition, in some form, at least, was not out of the question. Sale of liquor to Indians in the United States is banned by law, he pointed out, the Alaska sale is wide open.

William J. Zimmerman, jr., of the Indian Office, is en route to Alaska, following a telegram from Secretary Ickes, who went recently to Alaska to investigate PWA projects, demanding that something be done about the "shocking" situation.

Commissioner Collier said that Congress can legislate a ban on liquor for the Indians, but suggested Indian temperament had to be considered.

The Indian, he said, is sensitive to legislation he regards as discriminatory. He shows strong feeling when any law is directed at him as a race, he said. But "something must be done," Collier said.

The Alaskan Indian, until recently, has not been considered a ward of the Government, and several situations are yet to be adjusted, including the matter of hospitalization for the numerous tuberculosis cases in the territory, the commissioner said.

More than a hundred Red Cross workers from various Eastern cities are attending the conferences at the Shoreham Hotel following which they will return to the respective fields to participate in the annual roll call. Pantomime groups illustrated the work that has been accomplished during the past year. Local Chinese are shown at left portraying work that is being done in war-torn China. Among those in group, Mrs. Z. T. Ing, whose husband is a member of the Chinese Embassy staff; J. Y. Yee, June Lee, Muriel Lee and Mrs. C. G. Wy. At right—Edgar Morris, general chairman of the roll call executive committee, and District Commissioner Melvin Hazen as they discussed the program of the evening.

2,000 Watch Child Parade, Bridge Rites

With fanfare of trumpets, a child safety parade and street dancing, 2,000 citizens of the Northeast section joined the Metropolis View Citizens Association in Edgewood Park, at Third and Evarts streets last night in celebrating the first anniversary of the organization, and the opening of a bridge across the railroad joining Michigan and Rhode Island avenues by way of Franklin street extended.

Inspector Morris Collins headed the parade, which formed on Michigan avenue and marched on Franklin street to Lincoln road, where a tape-cutting ceremony, symbolizing opening of the street, was held. Shirley Francis Miller, 8, daughter of the association president, and Frank Boccabello, 10, handled the shears.

Girls in red capes, white trunks, high blocked hats, shouldering miniature guns, followed in line. Others, clad as sailors, in red shirts, with white blouses and the American flag, and in Sonja Henie skating costume, and boys on bicycles and toy wagons, 125 in all, represented the Edgewood playground.

Elks Band Plays.

The junior band of the Washington Lodge of Elks, and the Knights of Columbus band furnished music for the marchers and for the dancing which followed dedicatory ceremonies. Miss Sybil Baker, representing the playground department, congratulated Mrs. Virginia Neilsen, playground supervisor, and the association, on the civic spirit of the demonstration.

Value of organization was emphasized by L. A. Carruthers, president of the federation of citizens associations. Harry Clemons, representing the highway department, told of development of the bridge and street project, costing $500,000, and promised other improvements for the section in future. A letter from Commissioner Melvin Hazen presented felicitations.

Senator Copeland Praised.

A. I. H. Scheer, president of the Northeast Suburban Conference of Citizens Associations, expressed appreciation of the efforts of the late Senator Copeland in securing the bridge over the railroad in interest of child safety, and suggested that citizens bend their efforts to have the bridge named for the Senator.

Other speakers included Marvin McLean, president of the Brookland Citizens association for two decades; A. I. Lawless, president of the North Capitol Citizens Association, and James Crooks, its secretary; John Hurley, president of the Michigan Park Citizens Association; Benjamin Bollinger, a charter member of the Metropolis View Association; Mrs. Richard Purcell, Mrs. Virginia Neilsen, W. M. Clements and James Sherwood.

New Police Trial Board May Get 2 Officers' Case

Hazen Awaits Return of Brown in Death of Colored Man.

Commissioner Hazen said yesterday he may order Police Pvts. R. N. Henry and John Nally before a newly constituted trial board for their connection with the shooting of Leroy Keys, colored war veteran.

Hazen said, however, he would wait until Police Supt. Ernest W. Brown returns from his vacation before taking definite action.

The hearing of the two police privates, who were ordered held for trial board action by the District Commissioners recently, is scheduled for September 13.

Should the District Commissioners and the ranking police officials decide to change the present status of the trial board, the case of Henry and Nally most likely would be heard by the new board.

At present the trial board is composed of three ranking police officials.

Hazen said he favored a trial board similar to the one which hears Fire Department cases. On the Fire Department trial board is an assistant corporation counsel, an assistant engineer commissioner and a fireman holding the rank of captain or higher.

Privates Nally and Henry previously had been exonerated in the fatal shooting of the war veteran by both the coroner's jury and the Grand Jury.

Upon a recommendation by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who studied the testimony of the two hearings, District Commissioners ordered the policemen before the trial board.

Private Henry is attached to the Third Precinct and Nally to the Tenth Precinct.

Astronomer Sees Two More Moons Circling Jupiter

The tenth and eleventh satellites of the planet Jupiter have been discovered by Dr. Seth Nicholson, of the Mount Wilson Observatory in California, it was announced yesterday by the Carnegie Institution here.

Dr. Nicholson located the new moons after a two-month survey of the largest planet through the 100-inch telescope. They are far too dim to be seen with ordinary telescopes.

Dr. Nicholson discovered Jupiter's ninth satellite, which is only 15 miles in diameter, in 1914. He has been with the Wilson Observatory since 1915.

Jupiter, which has 1,300 times the mass of the earth was first studied with a telescope by Galileo, who with a telescope about 2 feet long, in 1610 located four satellites, each almost as large as the terrestrial moon.

20,000 Wilson Stamps Are Sold in 1 Day Here

The Postoffice Department will issue five new stamps in the Presidential series next month, it was announced yesterday. More than 20,000 of the new $1 stamps bearing the picture of Woodrow Wilson were sold yesterday in Washington alone. They go on sale over the rest of the Nation today.

Red Cross Opens Fund Drive With Drama of Its Good Works

Pantomime Explains Use of Money to Aid Victims Wherever Disaster Strikes Upon the Earth; Half of Each Dollar for Local Relief.

Manifold activities of the American Red Cross—ranging from flood, famine and medical relief in China to first aid in the local back yard—were presented in pantomime at the Shoreham last night as the curtain was rung up on the District's annual Red Cross drive.

The dramatic program, vividly illustrating "where the Red Cross dollar goes," was given at a joint meeting of local leaders and about 100 Red Cross executives from Eastern States who are attending a three-day roll call conference of the Eastern area.

As a character representing "Mr. John Q. Public" looked on, at first with skepticism, but finally with the enthusiasm of a convert, members of the Civic Theater and other groups enacted scenes depicting the never-failing presence of the Red Cross in floods in China and in Kentucky, in a Washington hospital and in the critical emergencies of daily life.

The illustrations of the work of the Red Cross were presented with running commentary by Courtland D. Ferguson, radio roll call chairman; Raymond Clapper, vice chairman of the roll call speakers committee, and Fulton Lewis, jr., newspaper roll call chairman.

The pictures of floods at home and abroad lent point to the fact that the Red Cross spends for disaster relief 37 cents of every dollar it receives, the commentators declared. "There were 128 major disasters last year—a new high record," said Ferguson.

Another 50 cents of the Red Cross dollar is expended on local aid, Clapper said. He added that 14,000 articles of clothing and a quarter million surgical dressings were supplied last year to eight hospitals and 11 social agencies in the District.

A large part of the remaining 13 cents, said Lewis, is spent on emergency first aid work, accident prevention and life-saving instruction.

The pantomimes illustrating to "Mr. Public" how the dollar is to be spent will be given before clubs and civic bodies throughout the District and the East during this year's roll call campaign. The Washington drive, first in the Nation, will begin September 26 and continue through October 17. The District campaign annually serves as a model to other communities, it was said.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the speakers' committee, District roll call, was in charge of the presentation. Civic Theater players were assisted by Boy Scouts, Red Cross volunteers and a Chinese group that included Mrs. Z. T. Ing, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy. A safety motion picture, "Why Not Live," showing the dangers that lurk in every home, followed the pantomime.

In a brief talk welcoming the out-of-town Red Cross leaders to Washington, Commissioner Hazen observed that Washington "is your city as well as ours." With the observation that the Federal Government "doesn't pay much tax on the property it owns in the District," Hazen suggested that his hearers "ask your Congressman to give support" to the National Capital.

Preceding the dramatic presentation, Edgar Morris, roll call chairman for the District, entertained committee chairmen at a dinner, marking the first meeting of the city-wide roll call organization.

Four national officers who attended last night's program were James L. Fieser and Ernest J. Swift, vice chairmen; Richard F. Allen, manager of the Eastern area, and Walter Davidson, assistant manager.

Others present included: Earl Nash, of the local roll call executive committee; E. W. Libby and Mrs. Godfrey V. Wickware, Government committee; E. B. Prettyman and Curtis Hodges, professional committee; Charles A. Robinson, Bruce Allen, J. K. Althaus, Gardner Moore, and Mark Lansburgh, general business committee; Mrs. E. G. Montgomery and Miss Elizabeth Wightman, residential committee; Mrs. E. J. Swift, booths committee; Lieut. Col. P. G. Nevitt, speakers committee; Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, headquarters committee; Charles Duffey and Ford E. Young, publicity committee; Adrian Waring, George F. Jones, O. H. Ritenour and Harvey Jones, area chairmen; H. J. Smith, uptown business committee, and Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen, advisory member who was chairman of the Government committee last year. Representatives of numerous civic clubs and organizations were also present.

Colleges Prepare Youths for Army

College and high school students graduated from the Reserve Officers Training Corps today could supplement officers of the regular Army and National Guard in furnishing adequate leadership for an emergency army of 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 men, according to a survey made public yesterday in Minneapolis by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

A total of 135,794 college and high school students received military instruction under U. S. Army officers during the academic year 1937-38, according to the report, as compared with 35,091 students given such training in 1916.

Of the 139 college and universities offering military training, 72 require all able-bodied male students to take a two-year course, while 67 offer either two or four years of instruction on a voluntary basis.

Pugh Assails Montgomery Sanitary Unit

Promises to Investigate It Thoroughly if Given Chance.

James H. Pugh, States attorney for Montgomery County, last night threatened thorough investigation of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, if at any time the Commission moved its offices or books into the county.

Pugh, addressing a meeting of the Independent Democratic faction of Montgomery County, said he had been powerless to investigate the commission since all books and records were in Washington. More than 250 attended the meeting.

Pugh, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State senator, declared: "If the commission should bring its offices and records into Montgomery County in the remaining months of my term, I guarantee the commission would be thoroughly investigated."

Follows Cantrell Attack.

Pugh's warning followed a speech by Joseph Cantrell, of Bethesda, attacking the sanitary commission for failure to have a public audit of its books.

"If I were a member of the commission, I would ask to have the auditors examine the books," he declared.

Cantrell, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Representative from the Fifth Maryland District, has long been a foe of the commission. Following election to the State House of Delegates in 1934 he launched an investigation of the commission.

He charged last night that the grand inquest committee of the Legislature had made a "whitewash report" on the commission in 1935. Referring to the pledge of the Independent faction to investigate the commission, Cantrell issued this challenge to the firm:

Challenges Commission.

"If all is well in your office and your books, then throw them open and let us bring it out into the light of day."

He added that legislation passed in 1937, granting two-year extensions in the terms of two commission members, had been sought to keep the present personnel intact so that no books could be examined.

Cantrell also said that if elected he would seek legislation taking Conduit road out of War Department jurisdiction, and would ask that Federal funds be granted for improvement of the road in Maryland.

Astaire-Rogers Hit Rates With 'Top Hat'

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

JUST three years ago to the very hour, as this is written, there was unreeled for the first time in Washington a motion picture which jerked me overboard into a sea of complimentary adjectives. Its title was "Top Hat" and its stars were Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Opening at RKO-Keith's Theater the following Sunday, which happened to be September 1, "Top Hat" immediately broke all first-day records for the Fifteenth street house and then proceeded to smash all other marks in the course of its nearly two-months run. The reception it received here was duplicated in New York, Chicago—practically everywhere the musical was shown.

With a pair of brilliant dancing stars, superb music by Irving Berlin, the rib tickling comedy of Helen Broderick, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore and Erik Rhodes, hilarious lines and situations and a sumptuous production, "Top Hat" wanted nothing. For sheer amusement, Hollywood has never sent out anything better.

It was a trip down to Hardie Meakin's film dispensary Sunday night to view 'Carefree," latest of the Astaire-Rogers vehicles, that set me to thinking of "Top Hat," which that eminent screen couple probably will never surpass. You know, their 1935 masterpiece was really too good, as far as Fred's and Ginger's subsequent pictures are concerned, because it inevitably became established as a very, very high standard to shoot at.

Even so, 'Carefree' may not only be mentioned in the same breath with "Top Hat," but, in this reviewer's opinion, it is quite the best Astaire-Rogers product which Washington has seen since that happy September morn three years ago. Don't ask why. "Carefree" has no dance number as charming as "Isn't This a Lovely Day." Its tunes can not be compared with those of its most illustrious predecessor. Helen Broderick is preferable to Luella Gear.

On the other hand, the 'Yam" proved every bit as diverting—if not more so—as the "Piccolino," Miss Rogers exhibits marked improvement as an actress and dance partner over her 1935 stature, the gags in the current attraction are superior. In connection with the latter, the only fault I find was that too many of them were drowned out in applause for the ones immediately preceding.

"Carefree," in short, is a lulu. Seekers after entertainment for its own sake, entertainment of the type that gives the brain a vacation and the pedal extremities a tickle, should not miss it.

If you like Kiplingesque narrative, tinctured with the rat-a-tat of machine guns, the Brittanic majesty of the bagpipes and beauteous mountain scenery in abundance, "Drums" is your meat. The English-made story of a boy, a woman and many men was previewed last night at the Rialto for a large and distinguished audience. Scheduled for an early showing at either Loew's Capitol or Palace, this Alexander Korda production, in Technicolor, offers chilling suspense, admirable spectacle, a powerful climax. Its top-billed player, the Hindu lad called Sabu, doesn't have the opportunities he had in "Elephant Boy," but he makes the most of all that come his way. As villains have such a nasty habit of doing, the scoundrel in "Drums," Raymond Massey, steals the acting honors as a foul murderer and usurper of his brother's throne on the northwest frontier of India.

"The World Is Yours," a special short subject to be released nationally in connection with the "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Eentertainment" campaign, went before the cameras this week.

Presenting the movie-going experiences of a typical American family—assuming there is such an animule—the short will have Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecelia Parker, Fay Holden and Charley Grapewin as members of the family circle.

Copies of the movie quiz booklet, indispensable to film matrons planning to enter the industry's $250,000 contest, will be available at all Washington picture theaters Thursday, the opening day of the campaign.

Because 'Keep Smiling," with Jane Withers, elicited a box-office response somewhat less optimistic than its title, it will be removed from the Columbia's screen after the final showing tonight and "The Crowd Roars" will be the principal feature when the doors are opened Wednesday morning. Presenting Robert Taylor as a boxer and with Maureen O'Sullivan, Edward Arnold, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander and other worthies in support, "The Crowd Roars" recently closed a successful stand at the Palace. The second installment of "Dick Tracy Returns" will be the chief supplement on the new bill.

In all the hubbub of bidding Nelson Bell bon voyage and wading through the archives on his desk, the new stage and screen attractions at Loew's Capitol for the week beginning Friday have been shamefully ignored.

Now that all the apologies are over, it is hereby announced that no less a luminary than Harriet Hoctor, the danseuse, will headline the vaudeville and the picture will be "Three Loves Has Nancy," with Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone, Guy Kibbe, Claire Dodd and Reginald Owen.

The stage portion will include, besides Miss Hoctor, Joe Morrison, the singer, who has played the Capitol twice before in the last three years; Johnny Burke, comedian, and the La Hart Troupe, acrobats.

Miss Gaynor, in "Three Loves Has Nancy," is a small-town girl, Tone a wealthy publisher and Montgomery is cast once more as a flippant so-and-o, the kind of role that catapulted him to screen fame.

Not a professional entertainment, but interesting and compelling withal, a colorful dramatic pageant was presented last night at the Hotel Shoreham as a preliminary to the annual Red Cross Roll Call which will be launched on September 26. "Mr. Public Decides" was directed by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox and commentators were Courtland D. Ferguson, Raymond Clapper and Fulton Lewis, Jr.

Scraps from all 'round: Week-end visitors were numerous at Glen Echo Park, whose summer season is entering the final stretch . . . "Three Loves Has Nancy" will be previewed this afternoon at the Fox exchange . . . Fay Wray is the only gal in "King Kong," being revived at the Metropolitan Friday . . . Rufus Blair, heralding the imminent arrival of the Ozark covered wagon ballyhooing "The Arkansas Traveler," promises that Charles Mooshian, wagon boss, will reach Washington "with reports of savage attacks, women in the harness, women spilling salt on wounds sustained by heroic men when alien shots split the plain's belly, women—stately as great cows and grammarless giving birth to babies on jolting floors of covered wagons trundling through tremendous night" . . . must be nuts . . . Shirley Temple is back in Hollywood . . . "The Little Princess" will be her next . . . "Marie Antoinette," next at the Palace, is making the operators of New York's Astor and the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles very happy.

Not only did Don Marquis' vinous comedy "The Old Soak" bring joy to another capacity house at the Cross Roads Theater last night, but Arch McDonald did the title role up with a ripeness and broad humor worthy of a Broadway production. As for the movie version of "The Old Soak," why our own Mr. McDonald both looks and acts the part with sounder effect than Wallace Beery, in the opinion of this slightly biased critic. It's a fat part, of course, but it calls for a very special nicety of touch.

But Arch McDonald is not all alone with his glory in "The Old Soak." The rest of the Cross Roads players play with amazing smoothness and strength, especially when you consider that they're turning out a play a week. Myrna Davis, as patient wife Matilda, resists all temptation to overdo. Ruth May, displayed equal good judgment in the broad comedy of the hired girl, Nellie. Even more difficult is the everyday American touch bestowed upon the part of Al, the bootlegger, by Frank Bolton. Not only mighty pretty, but a skilful little actress is Janice Norton, playing the night club dancer whose good looks start all the trouble. Theodore Field, as the boy in love with the dancer, Don Sisler and Peggy Mansfield as a pair of harmless sweethearts and George Finger as villainous Cousin Webster, all are up to a high standard.

One of the delights of the countryside theaters is the necessarily naive technic of settings. "The Old Soak" is no exception. You'll love the living room with its golden oak mantel, framed mottoes and pictures circa 1900. Also Cousin Webster's banking office with the safe that looks like an ice box. It don't seem right when he takes money out of it instead of a plate of cold cuts.

The story of "The Old Soak" is one of the best that ever sprang from Don Marquis' fertile imagination. It concerns Clem Hawley, whose weakness for knocking off frequent drams is only equaled by his genial humor. There are family complications with poor old Clem taking all the blame and finally extricating one and all from their troubles. Essentially, though, it is a play of manner and temperament more than plot. Its philosophy is one of tolerance, its humor of the easygoing, homely American type, but impregnated with the flash of the Marquis mentality.

If you can't guess who that bird man is who seems to have Mr. Pidgeon and Miss Loy somewhat flustered don't be disappointed, inasmuch as a pair of X-ray eyes would be required to determine that the guy behind all that shrubbery is none other than Clark Gable. 'Mrs. Wiggs' Opens at Olney With Adelaide Hibbard Star

The Washington police would have been a busy force with "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" out at Panjandrum Cochran's Olney Theater last night. As it was, however, there was not a policeman's peep at the performance of Alice Hegan Rice's famed old piece.

No, gentle reader, it was not that there were any indecencies in the script that would have demanded the gendarmes padlock nor were any of Mrs. Wiggs' beloved children involved in risque situations. The challenge which the law within our borders would have raised was that a child of 5 was appearing in a professional performance. Art is art in the District of Columbia, but children are also children and such wanton cruelty as the professional appearance of one so young is unthinkable. In nearby Maryland, however, such action is permissable and as a result the show went on.

As for the "Cabbage Patch," it seemed very obvious last night that Authoress Rice had mixed a good many sugar corns and even some fine, juicy maple trees among her cabbages. Director Vivian's cast, largely interspersed with students from Mr. Cochran's school, hobbled through the creaking situations as nobly as their experience would permit, letting the play rest frequently on three pairs of shoulders, the owner of the tiniest being aged 5.

Adelaide Hibbard, whose popularity in these parts is unique, was the sorely tried Mrs. Wiggs, a part she has played often and well. Paul Messink, free from his George M. Cohan role in the Roadsiders' production of the "The Tavern," was so effective as Mr. Stubbins as to win laughs from a house that was inclined to be cool.

Since the actions of the very young are always amusing to those to whom we laughingly refer as "grown-ups," it is difficult to explain 5-year-old Peggy Ann Garner's part in the proceedings. Undeniably, she is tiny and vital. She has the self-assurance of the very young, but she lacks the ghastly irritability of some of the more obnoxious. For her this reviewer admits a fascination, but he is always partial to blondes.

Margarete Wilson played well as a russet-haired Lovey Mary. In his brief appearance as the head of the matrimonial agency, Gordon Richards gave a welcome note of assurance and experience to a lagging scene and Leslie Denison was a stern Deacon Bagby. Daisy Lovering was the uncertain Mis' Hazy and Howard Furguson a likable lad labeled with the poisonous name of Billie.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug. 29.—Universal is certainly going places with their new set-up. They have just signed Bing Crosby for his one picture away from the home lot. If it's as good as his last one, "Sing You Sinners," they'll find themselves with a smash hit on their hands. To me, Bing is the success story of this town. Always pushes co-workers ahead and doesn't care who steals the picture so long as it's good.

It isn't true that Luise Rainer won't renew her contract at Metro. Terms have already been agreed upon.

One of our favorite Russians, in his leaner days, borrowed quite a sum of money from Ben Bernie, and from a few others in our town. Now the Russian is doing all right for himself. But still has done nothing about the debts. The other day Ben got up nerve enough to ask for his. The Russian said, "But you're my best friend—I wish as a great favor, you'd let me pay you at last." Try it some time—it worked.

Now that "Four Daughters" is a box-office hit, they should revive "Four Sons," following which they could do a sequel title "Sons Meet Daughters," which could go on for generations.

Garnett Offers Something New In Tricky Film

'Trade Winds,' Acting Fitted to Foreign Scenes, Is Eagerly Awaited.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Tay Garnett, who shot a whole feature picture without a single actor in it, opened Hollywood's magic box today and started peopling the film with such performers as Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, and Ann Sothern.

When he finishes the job he will have such a movie as nobody ever made before. Every single scene will have been made inside a sound stage here. But all the Oriental scenery will be genuine.

Even when March takes a drink in a Saigon saloon, he will be doing his elbow bending at United Artists studios while the slant-eyed folks walking past the window will be real. Garnett photographed them two years ago, though they never knew his cameras were grinding.

The picture is called "Trade Winds." Its manufacture is a development of a movie stunt which has been in use for many years.

Technique Kept Secret.

"The idea of sending camera crews to the jungles or the deserts or whatever for background shots is old stuff," director-producer Garnet reported. "I was directing a picture not many years ago which called for a Far Eastern background. So the studio sent a camera crew to get background shots in China. The crew came back with thousands of feet of handsome landscape, which didn't fit into the film at all. A second crew went all the way to the Orient with no better luck. A third crew did a little better. We finally used seven Chinese backgrounds, which cost several hundred thousand dollars. All our other background was false."

Garnett decided that the only way a director could get the kind of scenery he needed was to have his story written beforehand, go to the scene himself, and record it with due regard for the actors later to be inserted.

So he wrote his own story. Then he and a crew of 14 boarded his yacht, Athene, and sailed around the world, taking pictures as they went.

The merging of the original scenes with the action of stars March and Bennett, done with plenty of Hollywood abacadabra and complete secrecy, is a fascinating one to watch. Only Garnett wouldn't let us peek unless we promised not to discuss his methods. He said he thought too much revelation of technical secrets ruined the show for the fans. Maybe so. Anyway, we promised—and so spent the morning watching March and Bellamy ride down a crowded Shanghai street in Rickshaws.

Oblivious to Camera.

What we couldn't understand was the fact that the shopkeepers, pedestrians, the horses, the truck drivers, and even the traffic cops paid no attention to the camera.

"That's because they didn't know they were being photographed," Garnett said.

Even when March and Bellamy got into the modern part of Shanghai, the scene shows such things as gasoline trucks with Chinese lettering, Oriental beer trucks drawn by undersized horses, and actual Chinese businessmen, mostly in overcoats with fur collars. Hollywood, despite all its resources, never could have achieved such reality at home.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 29.—In refreshing contrast to the countless frauds perpetrated in the name of charity, we give you today the college All Stars-Professional champions football game at Soldier's Field.

The sponsors of that annual game, scheduled for tomorrow night, have made charity a virile, enterprising business which depends not on the tender mercies of the public but gives value for value received. Charity, as represented by the All Stars-Pros games, does not mooch. It doesn't seek hand-outs. It simply sells itself.

POVICH.

It is a charity affair that pays as it goes and at the finish takes down a $50,000 profit. That $50,000 represents the residue of a $150,000 gate at the football game. It is distributed in equal parts to Catholic, Jewish and Protestant charities of Chicago. It could be a greater sum, undoubtedly, but Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., which sponsors the game, would not have it otherwise.

The sponsors prefer to sell the game to the paying public on its merits, not to play on the people's kindness. Thus they insure themselves an attraction by paying the professional team $25,000 for its part in the game. Each member of the college squad of 65 receives $100 and expenses for his participation. And the five college coaches are not asked to work gratis in exchange for the fame and national publicity attendant on the game. They are paid, handsomely.

Insist on Paying for Park.

Nor does Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., attempt to bring to bear its powerful influence in the city to obtain the use of vast Soldier's Field gratis. That could be done, of course. But the game sponsors prefer to pay for the park. To them it is worth the rental of $14,500 to keep other activities out of the stadium for several weeks and thus insure a well-groomed gridiron for the game.

Expense, even though it may cut deeply into the profits, is no deterrent if the success of the game can be added. No college all star lives too far to be summoned at the game's expense. When the voters who chose the college All Star team in 1936 selected Buzz Borries, of Navy, as one of the backs, Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., did not permit Borries' duties with the Navy to balk them. Washington was advised, the Secretary of the Navy's office took action, and Ensign Borries was rushed to California from the summer maneuvers in mid-Pacific and flown to Chicago for the game.

But after Borries arrived in Chicago he failed to impress the college All Star coaches with his work in practice scrimmages and sat on the bench throughout the night of the game. The coaches play no favorites. Reputations count for naught. Big-shot college stars and the lesser lights from the smaller schools start as equals when the scrimmages begin. The aim is to place on the field the team that strikes the coaches as the best team.

Greed is out, emphatically. Because 20,000 of Soldier's Field's 100,000 seats are too far distant from the gridiron to permit a fair view of the game, those 20,000 seats are not sold. They could be, for thousands are turned away at the gate, but charity refuses to capitalize on the situation. Everybody who buys a seat must get a fair shake.

Similarly, the probability is that the game next year will be taken out of Soldier's Field and moved to the smaller Northwestern University Stadium in nearby Evanston. Because the Northwestern seating arrangements give the fans a better view of the proceedings, charity is willing to sacrifice approximately $20,000 in gate receipts.

Game Is Bonanza for Pros.

Charity, in the case of this game, refuses to be bothered or annoyed with contracts with the All Star players, the coaches, the stadium or the professional team. There are no papers or documents in connection with the game. The Redskins' ownership will get $25,000 for sending its team into the game. How does George Marshall know that? Simply because Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, said so. There are no contracts or documentary evidence to that effect—simply Ward's word.

For the national professional champions, the game with the All Stars is a veritable bonanza. The $25,000 that the pro club gets out of the game is its greatest reward for winning the national league championship the season before. Because of the annual game here, the pro championship means ready money. It represents the pro league club owners' greatest incentive.

Even the championship game between the Redskins and the Chicago Bears here last December failed to net the Washington club one-fifth of the amount that charity will pay it after Wednesday's game. The Redskins and Bears, you remember, played in bitter cold to a gate of less than $18,000.

The professional league thus lends itself willingly to the All Star game. That the winner of the league championship shall play against the college All Stars is now a part of the league's constitution. The popularity of the All-Stars-Pros game is like manna for the professional clubs whose profits for the season can be doubled by the "take" from the Chicago contest.

Luck on Charity's Side.

Only one professional club ever attempted to force the charity game sponsors to raise the ante above the $25,000 offered. That team was the Detroit Lions, winners of the 1936 league championship. Owner Richards, of the Lions, got a short answer from Sports Editor Ward. "Take the $25,000 or leave it," Ward said. "There are six other good clubs in your league that will jump at the gate." The Lions took it.

From the outset the game has been a natural. The comparative ability of pros and collegians has long been a burning question with the Nation's football fans. And the game's sponsors have thus far been playing in luck, because the question continues to be unanswered after four jousts in the name of charity. Twice the teams have played to ties, and one victory for each finds them stalemated in the series. Never has the winning team scored more than one touchdown. One-sided scores could have ruined the series, probably would have cut it short. But charity has done such a swell job that the fates are now on its side, keeping the scores low and interest high.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Yankees Beat Browns, 8-4; Gomez Wins 15th

Tom Henrich Hits Fifth Home Run in Three Days for His 19th of Season; Hildebrand Victim of Yank Power.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 29.—Backed up by 12-hit support that included Tommy Henrich's fifth homer in three days, Lefty Gomez hung up his fifteenth triumph of the season and sixth in a row today as the Yankees beat back the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 4, to win the two-game series.

Although nicked for 13 hits, the slim southpaw had the situation well in hand at all times. He shut out the Browns from the second through the eighth, then eased up a bit in the ninth, when the Browns got three of their runs, two on Beau Bell's homer with Mills on base.

For four and a half innings it was a ball game. Each team scored a run in the first, the Browns on two hits and one of the two passes Gomez issued; the Yanks on a single by Henrich and a two-bagger by DiMaggio.

In the fifth, however, the champions scored four times, pasting Oral Hildebrand for four hits that included a ground-rule double by Gomez, singles by Rolfe, DiMaggio and Selkirk and two bases on balls. Hildebrand gave up three more in the sixth, when Crosetti and Rolfe doubled and Henrich clouted his nineteenth four-bagger of the season in rapid-fire order.

Henrich's streak started in the second game of Saturday's doubleheader with the Indians. He clouted two for the circuit in that game and followed up with two more against the Browns yesterday.

Welsh, Adair Net Winners

Billy Turner Advances at Edgemoor.

By Jack Munhall.

Turner disposed of Ricky Willis, veteran who only Sunday had eliminated Allie Ritzenberg, Government champion, in three sets and Adair was forced the same distance to whip Bill Buchanan. Turner's winning scores were the same as Adair's, 6—1, 3—6, 6—1. Welsh won, 6—3, 6—0.

Davie Johnsen, Middle-Atlantic junior champion who had been hoping against hope to recover from an illness in time to play in the tournament, finally defaulted his first-round match to Bill Godfrey. He is, however, still entered in the doubles.

In the doubles, Welsh and Dooly Mitchell, No. 1 seeded combination, led the parade of favorites. The three other seeded teams were idle, Lynch waiting in vain for Johnsen; Bill Breese and Buddy Adair not being scheduled and Lieuts. Farrin and Howard drawing a bye.

In a singles quarter-finals Channing, University of Virginia junior, faces Ray Stocklinski, Government tournament finalist, at 4:30 p. m.

The doubles matches, both at 5:30, pit Welsh and Mitchell against Ritzenberg-Tarpley and Breese and Adair against Oscar Steinhauser and Ed Hoffecker.

Pirates Beat Dodgers; Reds Defeat Giants

Bucs Uncork 15-Hit Attack to Win Final Game, 10 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29.—The Pirates, who have been up and down so much the last week, even Pie Traynor hasn't been able to keep track, definitely were up today as they scored eight runs in the first three innings and went on to slaughter the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10 to 1.

Since the second-place Giants, meanwhile, were losing to Cincinnati, Pittsburgh's National League lead was boosted back to five and one-half games. The Giants open a four-game series here tomorrow.

The Pirates' 15-hit attack on Bill Posedel and Wayne LaMaster was ample protection for Cy Blanton, who breezed along to his eleventh triumph. He gave up nine hits and helped himself along by driving in three runs with a pair of singles. Pep Young and Al Todd, who batted just ahead of him, split six of the Bucs' other safeties, Young's contributions including a pair of doubles.

Three bases on balls, an error and a force-out gave Pittsburgh two runs in the first; they got three more and routed Posedel in the second with doubles by Young and Todd. Handley's triple and a single by Paul Waner, the latter off LaMaster, and scored three more in the third on two-baggers by Rizzo, who returned to leftfield after a short illness, and Young and a single by Blanton.

The last two tallies came in the seventh on a walk to Suhr and singles by Todd and Blanton.

Redlegs Shake Slump With 6-3 Victory; Walters Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 29.—The Reds scored five runs in the seventh inning today to end their five-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the New York Giants, who were left holding second place in the National League by only one percentage point over the Chicago Cubs.

Singles by Frey, Berger, Myers and Cooke, Goodman's two-bagger and an error by Cissell on an attempted force-out figured in Cincinnati's big inning, which started against Harry Gumbert and finished against Walter Brown. Gumbert was charged with the defeat, his eleventh.

Bucky Walters went the route for the Reds to gain his eleventh triumph with seven-hit pitching. One of the hits was Mel Ott's twenty-eighth home run, hit with Danning on base in the third. It gave the Terrymen a short-lived 3-0 lead.

Whitehill Is Generous.

That run in the third resulted from the combined efforts of Case, who singled, and Lewis, who went him two better with a triple to deep rightfield. Case took the precaution of stealing second to be in scoring position for a single, but it was an idle gesture.

Washington took advantage of Whitehill's generosity to get its third run in the fourth inning. Simmons and Bluege walked before West beat out a bunt to third. Ferrell popped up to Hemsley, but Chase brought Simmons home with a high hoist to left.

It was Travis' bunt, following a base on balls to Lewis, that started the host club on its way in the fifth. Bonura scored Lewis and sent Travis to third with a smartly cracked single to center, and Cecil scored on Simmon's roller to Lary.

The final run was the result of Ferrell's double and a freak single by Chase that ricocheted off home plate and bounced some five stories high. Rick scored, after Case drew a pass, on Lewis' grounder to shortstop.

Kroner's pinch double and Heath's single gave Cleveland its initial run in the sixth, but this mild flurry didn't disturb Chase's composure. He breezed through the seventh like a traffic cop out for an airing. But Cleveland's second uprising in the eighth did disturb Chase, so much so he was pounding his glove, kick-

Cecil Travis' Great Catch Spikes Rally

Case, Lewis and Bonura Hit to Thrill 10,000 on Ladies' Day.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Assisted by some grade-A pitching by young Kendall Chase, the Nats slugged their way to a 6-4 victory over Cleveland yesterday, abruptly checking an alarming skid that threatened to bury them deep in the mire of the second division.

Chase, a dreamy-eyed southpaw slinger, put the brakes on Washington's skid and the Tribe's batting with a 10-hit performance. With the exception of a rough eighth inning, in which his own wild peg to second base paved the way for a 3-run rally, the youngster was in complete command. He had a scoreless game within his grasp until the sixth inning, and was dangerously near a complete blow-up in the eighth, but settled down like a tired old man into a rocking chair in the ninth.

Duel for an Inning.

His mates, of course, helped out with a bit of sound and solid clubbing, collecting eight hits off three Cleveland hurlers, one a robust home run into the left field stands off Al Simmons' mace. The drive brought the 10,000 ladies' day crowd to its collective feet with a shrill whoop, and they yelled for more every time Alfred came to the plate.

A miraculous, over-the-shoulder catch by Cecil Travis saved the Nats, perhaps, as much as Chase's heaving and the team's batting, for it retired the side in the midst of Cleveland's big rally. Travis reached into leftfield and took the ball, a lazy tap off the handle of Hal Trosky's war club, with the official scorer already putting it down as a hit. Averill, who had doubled, was rounding third even as Travis trapped the ball, and was easily out for a double play.

For exactly one inning it was a close pitching duel between pudgy Earl Whitehill, one-time National southpaw, and Chase, but Washington drew first blood in the second on Simmons' blast. The bases were as empty as a nitwit's head when Simmons strode to the plate and proceeded to shake the bleachers with his drive. The Nats went on from there to accumulate a commanding 5-0 lead before Whitehill left the game at the end of the fifth. Another run in the sixth completed the scoring.

Elden Auker Holds Boston While Mates Collect 17 Hits; Greenberg Goes Hitless.

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers today cleaned up a two-game series with the Red Sox, 15 to 1, behind the five-hit pitching of Elden Auker and the long-distance clouting of Rudy York.

York belted out two homers, his thirtieth and thirty-first of the season, and two singles to drive in six runs as every regular on the Detroit club, with the exception of Hank Greenberg, shared in a 17-hit attack on three Boston hurlers.

Both of York's homers came on first pitched balls.

Auker was never in trouble, coasting along on a two-run lead his mates gave him in the first inning. Joe Cronin tagged him for his sixteenth homer of the year for Boston's only run.

Bill Ackerman on Fishing

We had hoped to see at least a few of the white marlin taken off Ocean City this summer tagged and released, not merely for their conservation, but in order that something might be learned of their habits and lanes of travel.

Many have been released, but not nearly the number that should have been according to the total caught, more than 800. If any of them have been tagged, we haven't heard of it.

ACKERMAN.

Most sportsmen believe, if it isn't the first or wanted for mounting, marlin should be released for the sake of sportsmanship and fair play. Even the captains, who in the first flush of the run this season were vainly casting about for some means to prevent indiscriminate slaughter, failed to take to the idea of tagging, after we had interested the Acting Commissioner of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, Charles Jackson in the idea to the extent that he sent to the Pacific Coast for tagging pliers and tags. In addition, he made a special trip to Ocean City with several experts to show them how to do it.

Is it so hard to see that a white marlin, caught and tagged and released off Ocean City, would be press service news all over the country, if caught off Montauk or Cuba, and returned to the bureau? Advertising of a type that it is impossible to buy? Yet, as we noted before, as far as we know, the tags haven't been touched since Charlie left them there late in July.

In regards to the idea, S. Kip Farrington, jr., noted author of fishing stories, and who probably knows more about catching marlin than any other sport fisherman in the country, says in a recent letter, "I think it is a good idea to tag white marlin, and I hope you can get away with it. They are a cinch to release and not like the blue marlin, where, sooner or later, someone is going to be killed if they keep on trying it.

"Maryland owes plenty to the Townsends, and as far as I can see, is extremely unappreciative of what they have done. Ocean City is the luckiest town in the whole country from a fishing standpoint, probably in the world, and they don't even realize it. There are more people, hotels, garages, moving pictures and filling stations enjoying revenue from their efforts than anywhere else I know of, and that goes for Nova Scotia."

* * * *

We agree heartily that Jack and Paul Townsend have accomplished much in the pioneering of this great marlin fishing ground, that they should be credited with it. In our small way, we are trying to do just that.

We believe also that everyone in Ocean City, at least, should get in back of it so that anglers everywhere can know of the wonderful fishing to be had in these waters, and not put the whole load on the shoulders of a few fishing captains.

They should get in back of it to the extent of helping the Game Fishing Association, not only in its financing, but in getting over the petty jealousies, so that every captain operating out of the inlet is a member, supporting and working to build up a sport that has more devotees than any other pastime—in simple words, so that many unfamiliar with the sport now in the next year or two may be brought to know to the fullest the meaning of "Tight Lines."

* * * *

We feel our support of this fishing has been such during the last two years that our asking for its betterment is not in any way talking out of turn. It might be possible we are not on the right track, but if that is the case, it won't take much to change us, if any plan better than the tagging is brought to the front.

Before getting away from it, we would like to give Elizabeth Henry, business manager of the Eastern Shore Times, and Capt. Jim Jarman a pat on the back for what they have accomplished without much help.

* * * *

Fishing on Thursday with Capt. Tal Bunting, C. T. Miller landed a 20-pound wahoo measuring 48¼ inches in 15 minutes. This was the first of this species to be taken on the rod and reel at Ocean City.

* * * *

Dr. Charles Priest and Leland Alden fishing with Capt. Leo Droughton on the Sampan Saturday landed two marlin and lost two more with broken lines.

* * * *

* * * *

J. L. Busey's party was not so lucky, for they caught but one, fishing with Capt. H. C. Mattson on the Mousie.

At Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, last week, Mrs. Michael Lerner fishing for the expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, with her husband, internationally known as a sportsman, landed a white shark weighing 432 pounds. It is a world record of this species for women anglers.

* * * *

A blue marlin weighing 84 pounds caught off Block Island last week was said to be the smallest ever caught on rod and reel, but according to Erl Roman this is not true, as a Miss Margo Kinney, of Red Bank, N. J., recorded one in the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament of this year that was much smaller.

* * * *

However it is noteworthy as being the second blue marlin to be boated north of Florida or Bahama waters. The first was taken by Hugo Rutherford last month off Hatteras Inlet.

Justa Gal, Paying $12.80, Wins Feature at Marlboro

Shot Up Nips Place Money; Ardor Third

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 29.—Justa Gal, the smallest horse in a field of eight competing for the Southern Maryland Purse, drove to a length victory over Shot Up, with Ardor third, in a rip-snorting finish. Carrying the black and yellow colors of Mrs. M. R. Waugh, Virginia sportswoman, Justa Gal was well handled by Jockey Joe Sylvester, and paid her few backers a $12.80 mutuel.

A crowd of 4,000 watched Miss Epe go to the front as the pack started the mile and a sixteenth journey. Happy Chase was close to the leader, with Justa Gal next as the field passed the stands the first time. Shot Up was having trouble in the third section. Sylvester eased Justa Gal along 3 furlongs and then put her to a drive. She responded by disposing of Miss Epe, Happy Chase and Miss Hollywood, the latter having moved up.

In the stretch Justa Gal took a good lead before Shot Up came out of the pack with a rush. Sylvester used the whip on Justa Gal and some observers said that his bat struck Shot Up in the nose. Jockey Johnny Shanks, who rode Shot Up, registered a disallowed claim of foul.

Square Play, at a $12.20 mutuel, opened the program with a victory under the driving of Apprentice Jockey W. Kirk. Sumac was second in a photo finish with Prince Khayyam. Chilly Ebbie, a hot paddock tip, ran out at the turns much to the disgust of those who made the mare a favorite.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo and Roman Boy were out in front all the way in the day's 2-year-old race. The son of Ha Ha opened a good lead and won as his rider pleased. Vendor's Lien was second, beaten three lengths, with First Fling, the favorite, third. The winner paid $5.90, and completed a $31.60 daily double.

Cancel, a veteran mare, romped to victory in the third event with Apprentice Beverly Hacker in the saddle. Off last, she circled her field to get to the front and held Travelo and Tuleyries Lin safe in the stretch to pay $5.90.

Ginger Hackle, paying $8.40, took the measure of Reigh Tetrarch, the public choice, in the fourth race by a length and a half. The Wildair gelding went to the front after three furlongs and there were no catchers in the crowd. Philigal took third money from Scout Allow.

The trouble started when Lary and Heath punched singles to right and center. Hemsley drove a hot one at Chase who came up with the ball after a nice catch, whirled and tried to nip Heath at second. The ball missed Travis' upraised glove by a foot or so. Lary scored, Heath went to third and Hemsley pulled up at second.

Heath scored on Solters' grounder to Lewis and Averill brought Hemsley home with a resounding double. That brought Trosky to the plate and he tapped his slow hit over Travis' head which Cece nabbed and threw to second for a double-play on Averill.

The Tribe got a man on base in the ninth when Hale singled, but he was left with his thoughts as Chase turned on the steam.

The latter was close to the pace throughout and closed gamely under punishment to just miss. CHATTERDOO was unprepared for the start and hung after getting to contention. DREAM HOUR was allowed to drop far out of it and closed with good energy. DAY LETTER and SPOTLESS also had little chance with the poor start.

Bill Bennings . . . at the Post

Dear Al: Selections at Marlboro.

Havre de Grace has a new grandstand located between the clubhouse and the paddock. It will seat 2,000 and should prove handy for those who like to see the bangtails leave the paddock. El Chico, William Ziegler, jr.'s, great colt, may be seen in action at the Graw. He is eligible for the Eastern Shore. By the way, the start of the Susquehanna River meeting is less than three weeks away. There is a report that Burning Star has bowed a tendon and has been taken out of training. The 559 yearlings sold at Saratoga this year averaged $51 less than the 528 sold in 1937. This year's average was $2,336. The West Coast supplied some of the fancy bidders. The 3-year-old championship is a mess this year. Practically every week-end brings a new candidate. There is some talk of a Seabiscuit-War Admiral race this fall. I'll believe it when I see it. It seems that the handlers of both horses won't get in action unless they have a shade the best of it. The great mares, Esposa and Marica may clash in the Endurance. This would be a race worth the while of Maryland turf goers. Clocker Mike's "Talk-a-Horse" invention gave the Benningites another trying horse in Shot Up. Mike claims the horse was fouled. He quotes Amgood as saying, "I'm well named. If I don't win that seventh race tomorrow, I'm going to be darned close." Mike's girl friend, Sally Sidesaddle, didn't fair so bad with her first selections. Huppy was beaten only a head by a horse that beat the gate. She likes Dark Revue. BILL.

First race—Jolly Feast closed like an express train in a better field last out after being away poorly. Needs only to get off well to take down this purse. Mr. Fingers tried at Hagerstown and he had some hard luck. Speedy Boy for the show end.

Second race—Hi-Blaze turned in a much improved effort to be second last out and needs only to stay in at the turns. Kiliclap seems outclassed at first glance but is much better than that most recent effort. Six O'Clock has speed and is dangerous.

Third race—Janstar is tossed in here with only 98 pounds. Loves the soft track and may come from behind and win. Miss Symphony has some class and is a threat. Crossing Over for the show end.

Fourth race—Goodwine turned in a nice performance in that first outing here. With the right handling this one is capable of taking down the major award. Stand By is better suited than in that last. Justa Giro has plenty of foot and should be in the thick of contention.

Fifth race—Dun Lucky may be ready to take a fall out of these. Has defeated this kind and has worked well. Dark Revue had some trouble in that recent outing. Call Me Anne is dangerous off one of her races.

Sixth race—Famous Clayton was away poorly here last week and ran a bang up race. With better luck at the break, this one may score. Sea Finn and the Arthur entry of Lucky Turn and Mamuck seem to be better than the others.

Seventh race—Prince Pettie doesn't meet much in this field and may be ready to take down that long awaited purse. Halloo, the probable favorite, is fit. Grunt downed maidens here and might surprise at the long route.

Eighth race—(Substitute.) If this event is used I'll take Sun Sweep, Tuleyries Star and Boulderdam.

Feldman Wins Unanimous Decision Over Lee in Fight Feature

Cal Cagney Kayoes Foe In 6 Rounds

Fight Is Stopped as Esposito Is Barely Able to Stand.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Lew Feldman, the fancy fisticuffer from New York, jabbed and boxed his way to a unanimous eight-round decision over Paul Lee in the feature bout last night at Griffith Stadium.

Sharing interest with Feldman's victory in the eyes of some 1,100 fans who turned out for the proceedings, was the appearance of Jack Johnson, first colored heavyweight champion, who refereed two colored bouts.

Johnson prefaced his officiating with an informal talk on what's wrong with boxing and demonstrated his words with agile movements of the lower limbs. The old fellow still moves around as quickly as some younger men. His remarks, good advice, incidentally, could be crowded into three easy lessons in boxing.

Unlike Feldman, Johnson did not move around enough in the ring, but spent most of his time ordering the boys to "break it up in thea, and step back!" He had two hard fights to handle, but did a good job, twice stopping the last between "Slugger White and Kid Howie, to warn both against stalling.

Johnson, incidentally, didn't do the District fighters any good in the bouts he worked, for both losers were promising young Washington fighters.

Paul Lee Rallies.

But the reliable Lee rallied to make a fight of it with a punishing two-fisted attack in the latter rounds. He was at his best in the fourth and fifth, when a sizzling right hook opened up a thin gash over Feldman's left eye, and a straight left carved another chunk of flesh out of his nose.

Lee staggered the cagey Feldman with a potent right to the jaw in the seventh and drove him into the ropes with both hands pumping furiously to the body. But Feldman was game and willingly fought out of the corner, then boxed his way out of difficulty. Feldman's work was beautiful to behold, but it is difficult to overlook Lee's courageous stand.

Cal Cagney Wins.

Cal Cagney, 150½, the durable Italian, scored a technical knockout over Larry Esposito, 148, after 2 minutes of punching on Cagney's part, and catching on Esposito's part.

Cagney was simply too tought and rugged for the Brooklyn boy, and had things his own way from the first bell.

Esposito went down for an eight count in the fifth round when Cagney turned loose a torrent of blistering rights and lefts on his midsection. He wobbled around on shaky legs to finish the round, but went down for a nine count in the sixth from the same vicious attack. Referee Harry Volkman took a good look at him as the courageous but badly beaten gladiator struggled to a vertical position, and mercifully stopped the contest.

Al Weill unveiled another promising ring prospect in young Mario Severino, 128, who displayed a potent two-fisted attack in winning a unanimous decision over Jerry Hall, 124, in the six-round opener. Severino not only dished out punishment but showed unusual ability to absorb leather. Best of all, he fought back when the blows hurt—the mark of a real champion.

Marcus Pitts, 122½, outpointed Billy Banks, 125½, in a rough affair that found Pitts forcing the issue from bell to bell. This style completely muffled the clever Banks' guns. The latter fought back courageously and shook up Pitts with several stinging rights to the head, but couldn't follow up.

"Slugger" White, 136½, tapped out an easy decision over Kid Howie, 134½, in a slow, but hard-fought six-rounder. Howie's left eye was closed at the finish, and White's left optic was badly bruised. It was a dull fight to watch, and the fans didn't hesitate to express their opinions.

Coach Ray Flaherty Hits 'Overconfidence' in Hot Speech in Redskins' Dressing Room

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Head Coach Ray Flaherty, speaking in booming tones as he paced the floor of the Washington Redskins' locker room, today demanded a greater display of zest for Wednesday night's game against the College All-Stars at Soldiers' Field.

As the Redskins sat on their benches in rapt attention, the red-headed, freckle-faced coach lashed out at what he called their overconfidence and warned them that anything less than 100 per cent output Wednesday night would result in their defeat.

"You fellows are acting too much like world champions before the game," shouted Flaherty. "The time to act like the champions is Wednesday night. We won the league championship because we didn't underestimate the opposition. And if we lose to the college All-Stars it will be because you fellows underrate them. That team those college coaches will put on the field will be a tougher outfit than anything we saw last year. But you fellows don't seem to think so. You're not working as hard. You're not taking this game seriously enough. Youre letting me down and you're letting down those Washington fans who supported you last season and are expecting big things from you Wednesday."

The Redskins' coach turned his back on his players for a full half minute to permit his words to sink in and resumed.

"I'm not satisfied with the way you've taken to our new plays. We've got to have a lot more pep out there. A lot more fire. This is going to be no tea party and the fellows who think so are apt to get hurt in that ball game.

"I see by he papers that some person called up Bo McMillan, the college coach, and offered to sell him the Redskins' plays. He told McMillan he knew the plays, well, all I can say is that if he's telling the truth, he knows a lot more than a lot of you fellows."

Flaherty's tirade, despite its cutting qualities, is not exactly alarming. The Redskins' coach is a past master at whipping his athletes into a competitive fury and is known as a coach who is never satisfied with his team's performance in practice. Flaherty's pre-game speeches are all of the same ilk, exhorting more fire and dash from his squad each week.

But his talk today left an impression on the Redskins, apparently. With a whoop and a holler they trooped out on Soldiers' Field for an afternoon practice session and worked for more than two hours with new zest.

The workout was featured by passing drills on both the offense and defense. Knowing that the collegians are familiar with all of the Redskin plays of last year, Flaherty has devised an entire new set of passing tactics with the halfbacks seeing much more duty as receivers.

Flaherty's emphasis on his pass plays tips the Redskins' hand. There never was much doubt that Slingin' Sammy Baugh and his $15,000 arm would bear the brunt of the pro-champions attack but there is now evidence that the Redskins are committed to a passing game more definitely than ever.

Don Irwin's injury, however, continues to be a source of worry to Flaherty. The Redskins' fullback is still favoring his twisted knee and it is doubtful if he will see much action Wednesday night. Irwin will be used only if the Redskins are in a spot to need his line-plunging tactics, Flaherty intimated.

Indications were that the Redskins would take the field Wednesday with a veteran in every position in the line and backfield. Flaherty, at odd moments, is considering the insertion of George Karamatic at the fullback post. But the likelihood is that stocky Max Krause, stellar defensive player, would get the call in a backfield in which Baugh, Pinckert and Riley Smith would be his running mates.

If there is a rookie in the Redskins starting line-up it will be Bob Masterson, the University of Miami end. Capt. Turk Edwards, suffering from a sore toe, may not be able to boot the opening kickoff, in which case Masterson will get the job with 6-to-5 the best obtainable odds in several shops.

49 Golfers Seek Places In Amateur

Congressional's par of 72 bluffed 35 of the players entered in the sectional qualifying rounds for the National Amateur, in practice rounds yesterday. Levi Yoder, sectional medalist last year, and Earl McAleer, host club southpaw, reported the best trial rounds, 74s.

A field of 49 players, 31 from this city, 11 from Baltimore, three from Virginia and a quartet from Hanover, Pa., today will seek the eight berths to the National Championship over the 36-hole route. The field was reduced by one as Harry Parr 3d, Baltimore Country Club, withdrew.

Other satisfactory rounds included a 76 by the Middle Atlantic and Maryland State champion, Otto Greiner, and 77s by two Baltimoreans who are nearly even money bets to gain a berth, Spencer Overton and Ernie Caldwell.

Greiner, Bobby Brownell, Manor youngster; Billy Shea, the host club's District champion, and Yoder are heavy favorites, while the other four places should be wide-open fights.

A par total of 144 for the two rounds should be good for the gold medal awarded the low sectional qualifier by the U. S. G. A., while any one of the 49 players who can pair a two 75s should be assured of a crack at Johnny Goodman's crown at Oakmont. Opinions range from 150 to 157 for the low eight scores.

Mrs. Walper Scores Ace in Tournament

Mrs. Leo Walper's hole-in-one on No. 11 featured the Washington Golf and Country Club's ladies' day members and guests tournament yesterday. Playing with Mrs. O. M. Reed, of the host club, and Mrs. W. Wells, Belle Haven, Mrs. Walper's tee shot found the cup on the 134-yard hole.

Mrs. J. A. Bullock, Indian Spring, won the guest tournament with a net 37 on the first nine while other winners included Mrs. J. T. Powell, Manor, 39; Mrs. R. A. Lacey, Columbia, 40; Mrs. Dunbar, Indian Spring, 41; Mrs. Stabler, Columbia, 41; Mrs. Warren, Army and Navy, 41; Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Wheat, Belle Haven, 43.

Mrs. Whittaker, Army and Navy, had low putts with 31.

Winners among the members included Mrs. R. D. Young, 37; Mrs. R. Nicholson, 38; Mrs. Phelps Adams, 41; Mrs. McLendon, 43, and Mrs. O. M. Reed, 43.

Mrs. G. C. Roney, golf committee chairman, had low putts with 32.

Schumacher's Arm Bad, Doctor Reports.

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—Dr. Robert F. Hyland, club surgeon of the St. Louis Cardinals, said tonight Hal Schumacher, right-handed pitcher for the New York Giants, "has several chipped bone fragments" in his hurling arm.

The diagnosis, Dr. Hyland said, was made last week while the Giants were playing the Cardinals here. Schumacher did not pitch during that series, but set the Cincinnati Reds down Sunday with five hits for a 7-3 victory.

Dr. Hyland said the big right-hander's elbow was in a condition "very similar" to that of Carl Hubbell, Giants' screwball artist.

Large Entry In Regatta

Chesapeake Bay Area Interest High.

By Jack Munhall.

The popularity and thrilling appeal of the President's Cup Regatta has struck such a responsive chord among sail and motorboat racers in the Chesapeake Bay area that it may be difficult to accommodate all prospective entries for the annual event, Dr. C. Bache Gill yesterday told the weekly luncheon meeting of the Fo'scle Club at Hotel Raleigh.

Dr. Gill, recently returned from that section, estimated that more than 1,000 Chesapeake Bay racing enthusiasts are planning to attend the regatta, September 17-25, inclusive. Chief task of the Regatta Association officials will be in affording ample pit service space for the visiting crews.

Unanamipus approval of the selection of Elizabeth Reed as 1938 Regatta Queen was voiced by club members. James A. Councilor, general chairman of the Regatta Association, then announced Miss Reed's Court of Honor—to consist of six young ladies—will be chosen shortly, and that a special Fo'scle party will be held in their honor.

Indications are that a United States Navy destroyer will be on hand at the Watergate during the pageant, September 22. An invitation also has been extended through the French Ambassador to have a French gunboat, scheduled to be in Washington Navy Yard at the time, visit the scene.

District, Virginia Golf Pros to Meet

Plans for the challenge match between Washington and Baltimore golf professionals will be completed next week, with dates to be set and courses selected, according to Al Houghton, captain of the Virginia team that includes Bobby Cruikshank, Errie Ball and Chandler Harper.

Eighteen holes will be played at Washington Golf and Country Club and 18 at either Richmond or Norfolk. The Nassau system of scoring will be used and total points for the two matches will decide the winner. The local team will be Wiffy Cox, Leo Walper, Cliff Spencer and George Diffenbaugh. A side bet of $1,000 between sportsmen of the competing cities has increased interest in the match.

No Title Fight.

Los Angeles, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The proposed Henry Armstrong-Ceferino Garcia welterweight title fight cannot be held October 3, as planned, and may be put over until the middle of December to permit the triple-champ to recover from a slightly infected lip, his manager, Eddie Mead, said tonight.

Redskin Notes.

If any of the All-Stars distinguish themselves Wednesday night, Coach Flaherty hopes that the fellow will be Andy Farkas, the hard-driving halfback from Detroit. Farkas will join the Redskins immediately after the game.

Hardly mentioned in Chicago's pre-game stories of the game is the man who can, conceivably, run wild Wednesday night. He is Dick Tuckey, the Redskins' rookie from Manhattan College.

Seeking to keep the game on an entirely noncommercial basis, the officials recently rejected a $50,000 offer from a would-be radio sponsor for the broadcasting rights. All stations were invited to participate gratis.

Handicapped by their lack of advance information concerning the College All-Stars' tactics, the Redskins' coaches are proceeding warily on the assumption that the collegians will use Bo McMillan's Indiana plays. But they are not banking too heavily on that guess.

Jack League On Mat Card

Favorite Here to Meet Mike Mazurki.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Jack League, a reformed heavyweight prize fighter and first cousin of Jack Dempsey, has been added to the list of performers on Thursday night's show at Griffith Stadium.

Fair-haired boy of the ringsiders, the kind of a guy who upsets most of the boys because of his flair for honest wrestling and a desire to abide by the rules, League faces Joe Dusek in a 30-minute engagement. Dusek, you know, isn't such a stickler for rules, which virtually guarantees an interesting session.

League hasn't been a consistent winner in Washington for two good reasons. To begin with, Promoter Joe Turner hasn't picked any soft spots for him but tossed him in against the toughest opposition available. Secondly, his aversion for foul play hasn't helped any, because, while League is struggling to clamp a legitimate hold on his opponent, said opponent is gouging, kicking and gagging.

Another bout announced last night involves Red Ryan, winner of last week's battle-royal, against an opponent to be named. And the entire group, as if you didn't know, are supporting the main bout between Bibber McCoy and Ernie Dusek.

Track Meet Finals Today.

Approximately 1,000 girls and boys are expected to compete in the final track and field meet of Arlington County, starting today at 10 a. m. on the Washington and Lee High School track.

Indian Spring Pro-am Ends in Two-Team Tie

Houghton-Goode and Diffenbaugh-Sharpe Deadlock With 64s; Gibson, Bass and Walper Tie in Sweepstakes With 72s.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood pro and his amateur partner, H. W. Sharpe, of Indian Spring, tied Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, Va., mentor, and L. J. Goode, Columbia, with net 64s in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tourney at Indian Spring yesterday in one of the season's biggest affairs.

The pro sweepstakes ended in a three-way deadlock at 72, with none of the field of 22 players able to equal or better par figures of 71. Andy Gibson, Maryland Open champion, with 39-33; Leo Walper, sectional P. G. A. titleholder, and Johnny Bass, Clifton Park, Baltimore, each with a pair of 36s, split the top prize three ways.

Houghton also finished in a tie for second in the pro-am play with another partner, Harry C. Peacock, of the host club, as they tied the 66 of Gibson and Charles Janney, of Clifton Park.

Five teams deadlocked at 67, with the amateurs receiving prizes. The pros only share in the first two prizes. The teams were Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, and Eddie Ault, of the host club; Diffenbaugh and Harry Peacock, Al Jamison and Jerry Hart, of the Four Corners Club; Bill Schreiber and C. E. Grigsby, Mount Pleasant, and Alec Taylor and Eddie Boswell, Rolling Road.

The amateurs that shared in the first-place deadlock, Sharpe and Goode, really earned their victory as the former, aided by several handicap strokes, helped Diffenbaugh by four shots on the front nine and seven on the back while Goode clipped four shots off Houghton's first nine and came through on five holes on the return trip.

The Gibson-Janney and Houghton-Harry Peacock duos that tied for second each had twin nines of 33. Peacock figured in second and third place ties among the simonpures, as he played with two pro partners.

Gibson, out in 39, appeared out of the pro sweeps with his four over par performance but he birdied four holes on the tougher back nine, 11, 13, 15 and 16, and then slipped over on 18 for the 72. Walper and Bass each had a pair of bidies and were over on three holes.

The scoring was unusually high and no less than eight pros tied at the 76 figure, 5 over par. Rut Coffey, Mel Shorey, Al Treder, Eddie Stevens, Tony Sylvester, Al Jamison, Ralph Beach and Bill Schreiber figured in on the unusual occurence. Houghton with a 73, Cliff spencer, 74, and Diffenbaugh, 75, were sandwiched between the winners and the 76s.

Spencer and Russ Hollebaugh had the lowest out nine of the day, a 31, including an eagle on the seventh by Spencer. He putted for eagles on all the par 5 holes, 7, 15 and 16.

The next M. A. P. G. A. pro-amateur event was set for Mount Pleasant on Monday, September 12, with Willie Schreiber, secretary of the local pro body, as host. Ralph Beach will hold one at Suburban before the season closes.

Cubans Take Tuna Crown

Americans Place Second in Annual Event.

Liverpool, N. S., Aug. 29.—Six salt-water fishermen from Cuba tonight parlayed a fisherman's hunch into the world deep sea fishing championship.

The Cubans, rated as added starters in the annual Sharp Trophy Tuna Tournament, piled up a three-point sweep in the closing day of matches to win the silver bowl emblematic of the world title.

The final score was: Cuba, 5½ points; United States, 3 points; British Empire, ½ point.

The Cubans won in one of the dullest fishing days that this famous North Atlantic hunting ground for deep-sea anglers has ever known. They went out on a blazing blue ocean that seemed as empty of fish as a bathtub, and when the fish didn't come in, they went scouting for them.

The American and British boats had spread over a 20-mile arc stretching from Moose Head to Port Mounten trying for the big "torpedoes" of the herring nets where they come in from the Atlantic to feed, but failed to get a strike.

The Cubans, finding no fish in the usual haunts, played for fishermen's luck. They began scouting the ocean.

Antonio Anguilera, a stocky former Cornell graduate who had never fished in open competition before the present tournament, decided to go on a hunting expedition, and headed for the arc.

Within an hour he found the school and hauled in another 61-pounder after a 20-minute battle.

Heurich Nips F. B. I.; Procurement to Play

The Heurich Brewers moved a step closer to the week-day city championship by stopping the Federal Bureau of Investigation nine, 5-2, on the South Ellipse diamond yesterday.

Cabell, Heurich leftfielder, was the hitting star of the tussle, collecting three hits in four trips to the plate, one of which was a double. Beall and Morgan were outstanding for the losers. Today at 4 p. m., Procurement tangles with the G-men. The losing team will be eliminated.

Auto Earnings Likely to Stay Under 1937's

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 29.—Third and fourth quarter earnings of General Motors Corporation will probably be under those of like periods last year, its chairman, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., said today upon his return on the Europa from a trip abroad.

Fourth quarter earnings of the automobile industry will probably be below those of the last 1937 quarter, he said, unless "a very radical improvement in the general business situation" takes place before the end of the year. In that event, he expects the automobile industry to prosper in ratio to the general improvement. The used car situation, cited earlier as one of the main drawbacks to current business prospects in the industry, was "relatively good" now, he said.

Sloan said he did not believe automobile prices would go higher in coming months. Nor does he anticipate any unusual changes in automobiles themselves or in the industry during 1939. He said "refinement of details and improved appearance" would characterize developments of the coming year rather than "anything radical."

Declines to Predict.

While he would not forecast general business prospects, he commented that "everybody says that business generally is getting better and if this is so the automobile industry will get its share."

In England and other European countries generally the automobile industry declined proportionately less in the past year than in the United States, he said. In Germany, he added, the automobile business is actually better than last year, with the General Motors German subsidiary running "very much better" in August and behind orders. He found conditions in Germany better, with no unemployment and a labor shortage, he said.

Edsel Ford, another passenger, declined to comment definitely on automobile industry prospects.

Retail Advertising Is 12.4% Under Year Ago

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Retailers' use of display space in newspapers for the week ended August 20 was 12.4 per cent under the corresponding week of last year and the smallest decline from 1937 levels shown since the week ended May 7 of this year, according to Advertising Age today.

The report, based on tabulations of all newspapers in 79 important cities, shows a total of 15,549,260 lines of retail display against 17,740,091 lines for the compared week of 1937.

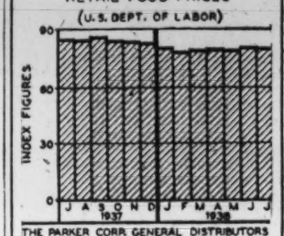
Retail Food Prices 7% Under Year Ago



Boston, Aug. 29.—The trend of retail food prices is most important because food is the biggest individual item in the family budget. Retail food prices in July were down 7 per cent from a year ago, although up somewhat from the low point reached last February.

Cotton Weak; December 8.25

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Cotton declined today under increased hedge selling and liquidation promoted by heaviness in other markets and nervousness over the European political situation. December eased from 8.34 to 8.25 and closed at the low, with final prices 11 to 14 points net lower.

The market opened 5 to 8 points lower owing to easiness at Liverpool. This offset a moderately bullish interpretation of cotton loan terms. Foreign selling and scattered liquidation dropped prices during the morning, when demand was restricted. Spot houses had more hedge selling orders. Rains in parts of the South over the weekend were considered favorable following recent dry, warm weather. Dryness in Oklahoma was unrelieved.

Wheat Drops Despite Acute Crisis Abroad

Government Purchasing Plan Also Fails to Check Selling.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Bullish implications of a European war scare and Government purchasing of wheat and flour were lost in today's selling-dominated wheat trade and prices retreated more than a cent a bushel.

Government buying of wheat so far was disappointing, but more importance apparently was attached to disclosure of the method which probably will be used in moving this wheat into export trade. At the same time, indications that American and Canadian government officials were no nearer agreement on co-operation in exporting the huge North American surplus dampened buying sentiment.

Thus, scattered profit taking on the basis of Saturday's 3 cents advance, some stop loss selling, liquidation of September contracts, on which delivery can be made next week, and switching of hedges dominated the trade in the absence of renewed buying support. Except for early steadiness prices were downhill most of the time, reaching the day's lows in the final hour. Weakness in securities induced some selling.

Wheat closed ⅝-1⅛ lower, September 63⅞-64, December 65½-65⅝; corn ¾-1¼ down, September 52½-52⅝, December 51¼; oats unchanged to ⅜ lower; rye ½-¾ down; lard 3 off to 3 up.

Steel Production Advances to 44%

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 1.2 points to 44 per cent of capacity, compared with 42.8 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 39.8 per cent of capacity while a year ago they were 84.1 per cent.

Stocks Drop Sharply as European Crisis Becomes Acute, Despite Favorable News.

New York, Aug. 29.—Europe's troubles became Wall Street's troubles today and while domestic trade reports did their best for those who wish to buy them low and sell them high, they found a surprising lack of co-operation from Mr. Hitler and other dignitaries who shape the course of events 3,000 miles away. It is all very discouraging but the fact remains that what may happen to the Sudeten Germans brought to the New York Stock Exchange the sharpest decline it has suffered since March 29, which is long before the current bullish swing developed.

Word that the British cabinet was going into executive session tomorrow, which should have interested only a handful of European diplomats, gave a severe case of jitters to American holders of domestic securities, and they forgot higher steel operations, the boost in carloadings and power production, and such bits of information as the improvement in construction to worry about what England might decide tomorrow to do about what Germany might decide to do about what a minority of the population of Czechoslovakia might decide to do about preserving its independence.

Reich Ditches Bull Swing.

Admittedly all this is very confusing and those painstaking students who have followed indices of domestic business with diligence have a just cause for complaint when they see stocks acting in direct contravention to all that should be. Let's blame it on the Germans; for today they took our bull market and practically ruined it.

The decline in stocks on the big board, measured by the composite average, was 1.57 points, and trading was fairly active on the decline, amounting to 1,248,850 shares. And all this took place when everyone was getting his lungs filled to cheer for the normal seasonal improvement in business which is scheduled to start with Labor Day.

But these foreigners seemed to have had something to say about it and now we come into a new day and must await what the British cabinet has to say at its meeting.

It is a good guess that cabinet members do not know what they must decide tomorrow. Certainly this is a week of grave decisions. That the British will take a firm stand in the Czechoslovakia crisis seems certain, but even if they do the world will still stand by with hope, rather than conviction, that a clash of arms between major powers can be avoided.

Such considerations affected Wall Street today and brokers reported that it was domestic selling rather than the foreign brand that caused the sharp sell-off in the morning. Comparatively little foreign selling was in evidence. It is true that foreign markets likewise were depressed, but the selling on the Stock Exchange was strictly Yankee. It was war scare selling, from domestic sources, without a doubt.

Steel News.

There was a good increase in steel operations, but Wall Street ignored it. Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors, landed from Europe, with a bearish bunch of words to say about the third quarter for the motor manufacturers; so apparently Mr. Sloan has not heard the good things his associates have been saying about the outlook.

General Motors stock was the most active yesterday and closed down 3 points. Chrysler was next, off 4½ and then steel, down 3⅜. Losses of to 5 points were sustained by the leading favorites, including United States Rubber, 2⅞; Yellow Truck, 1¾; Anaconda, 2¼, and Bethlehem, 4⅛.

Commodities ranged lower along with securities, wheat closing down ⅝ to 1⅛ and cotton selling off 11 to 14 points.

Bonds Weak.

Pronounced weakness characterized the bond market today as the tense European situation made its effects apparent directly and through the influence of sharply lower stock prices which had an unfavorable influence here. No division was immune, and this held true for Treasury issues, too, which, with the one exception of the 3¼s of 1941, showed losses ranging as high as 7-32.

Rail issues apparently lead the market downward under the warscare impetus. From 2 to 3 points were surrendered by the Southern Pacific and Southern Railway groups, and losses of up to 2 points were frequently noted elsewhere. Higher grade rails, such as the Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio and Union Pacific, lost fractions to a point, and in several instances even more.

Certain New York Central issues lost up to 4, while marked weakness existed in the Illinois Central, Delaware & Hudson, Missouri Pacific, and M-K-T groups. Despite the announcements that the B. & O. and the Nickel Plate would pay September 1 interest, liens of these roads were off.

In the utility sector the same lack of resistance prevailed, and Telephone, Consolidated Edison and Commonwealth Edison all dropped fractions. Speculative electric power issues were more vulnerable.

In the industrial sector, Bethlehem Steel showed minor losses for most issues, and the U. S. Steel debentures were off.

Rail Net Drops To .84 Per Cent For 7 Months

In the Same Period of Last Railway Operating Net Was 2.79 Per Cent.

Class I railroads of the United States in the first seven months of 1938 had a net railway operating income of $109,335,282, which was at the annual rate of return of 0.84 per cent on their property investment, according to reports to the Association of American Railroads made public yesterday.

In the first seven months of 1937, their net railway operating income was $360,451,578, or 2.79 per cent on their property investment, and in the first seven months of 1930 their net railway operating income was 450,935,427, or 3.48 per cent on property investment. This compilation as to earnings for the first seven months of 1937 is based on reports from 137 Class I railroads representing a total of 234,638 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first seven months of 1938 totaled $1,936,049,545, compared with $2,451,-958,783 for the same period in 1937 and $3,111,900,121 for the same period in 1930, a decrease of 21 per cent below 1937 and 37.8 per cent below 1930. Operating expenses for the first seven months of 1938 amounted to $1,554,186,560 compared with $1,825,155,423 for the same period in 1937 and $2,378,147,109 for the same period in 1930. Operating expenses for the first seven months of 1938 were 14.8 per cent less than in the same period of 1937 and 34.6 per cent below 1930.

Class I railroads in the first seven months of 1938 accrued $197,-064,346 in taxes, compared with 190,387,944 in the same period in 1937 and $208,450,360 in the same period in 1930. For the month of July alone, tax accruals of the class I railroads amounted to $28,060,809, an increase of $1,670,139, or 6.3 per cent, above July, 1937.

Fifty-eight class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first seven months of 1938, of which 23 were in the Eastern district, 9 in the Southern district and 26 in the Western district.

Federal Prisoner Retaken in Sleep

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—The last of three Federal prisoners who made a daring dash for freedom from St. Louis' city jail was back in custody tonight after less than 18 hours of liberty.

William Wright, 25, was captured as he slept in a shed near the jail.

Wright's two companions—George Yates, 23, alias George Sotak, of Rock Island, Ill., and Charles Watson, 19, a trusty—were arrested five minutes after they had slugged their way out of their second floor cell and fled.

Sped to Hospital Boy, on Trip, Dies

Ben Hall Lambe, jr., 18, 3246 S street northwest, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital, where he had been rushed in an ambulance from the steamer Southland, arriving from Norfolk, Va. He became ill while vacationing at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

The youth was the son of Ben Hall Lambe, an official of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. John A. Flannery, of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss Sally Lambe, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Va.

A DESCRIPTION OF HIS DOG

Bob Burns Says—

All the papers nowadays are full of pro and con arguments about the Government interfering with business. Personally, I think half the pleasure we get out of life is making plans and when other people interfere either for good or bad, they're bound to throw us off schedule.

I knew a fella who was sentenced to the penitentiary for three years. At the end of two years, the warden called him in and said, "You've been a good prisoner and I've talked the prison board into givin' you a pardon." The prisoner turned pale and says, "You can't do this to me! When I was sentenced here, I gave a fella a three-year lease on my house!"

Ne. Mansfield, Retired Police Aide Here, Dies

Charles E. Mansfield, 54, retired detective sergeant and former chief of the Police Narcotic Squad, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital.

Mansfield ended 31 years in the department last March, when, on the advice of his physician, he asked for retirement. He had been suffering from a heart ailment. He entered the hospital a week ago.

Once on Bicycle Duty.

Appointed to the force December 13, 1907, Mansfield's first assignment was in the "red light" district in the First Precinct, a section where police covered their beats in squads of four men.

Six years later he was assigned to bicycle duty. Shortly afterward he scored his first major coup when he captured a safe cracker at the Columbia Wholesale Packing Co., Tenth and C streets northwest. The man had $1,000 in cash and hand saws hidden in the lining of his coat. On evidence of Mansfield, the safecracker was sentenced to 15 years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

For many years a members of the narcotics squad, Mansfield was named its chief in 1930, and promoted to detective sergeant.

Broke Up Rings.

He was credited with breaking up more than a score of dope rings in the District. He worked with members of the Federal Narcotic Bureau on several major cases, and testified in Congressional hearings on legislation to curb narcotic sales.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Virginia Mansfield; a brother, Detective Sergt. Oscar Mansfield; two sisters, Mrs. Daisy Close and Mrs. Minnie B. Kepler, and a half brother, John Langley. Capt. Richard Mansfield, Ninth Precinct, is a first cousin.

Scrip May Be Used In Railroad Strike

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Two truce proposals, one a plan for part payment of employes in scrip, gained support today as conciliators attempted to settle the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad strike.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's approval of the scrip plan was announced by Harry E. Scheck, Federal labor conciliator. The other plan for suspension of the labor dispute called for a 90-day truce and had no connection with the scrip proposal.

Scheck said RFC officials in Washington had consented to the electric railroad paying salaries 85 per cent in cash and 15 per cent in receiver's certificates for 90 days. RFC approval was necessary, because the railroad had received a loan of $2,000,000 from the Government lending agency.

Driver Recovers Permit, Halts Suit On Its Revocation

Restoration of the driving permit of De Witt F. Drew, 1021 Columbia road northwest, yesterday prevented a test of the right of the Commissioners to revoke or suspend a driving license because of a traffic law violation.

Drew claimed the license could not be taken from him simply because of a speeding charge. He said the permit was necessary in his work and that to take it away would leave him without a job.

In a suit to restrain the Commissioners from taking away his permit, Drew stated he was arrested outside the District and contended District authorities did not have jurisdiction.

Through attorney Albert Lyman, Drew yesterday consented to dismissal of his suit because his permit was in good standing. Justice F. Dickinson Letts signed an order acquiesing in the dismissal.
